THE BREEZE OF SPRING.

Daill Winter hastens to be supe He's disappearing fast : The sunny hours are evening on, The stormy time is post. The see us long r hours the rill, Nor snows their mantie flong ; For every blenk and harren bil Hus ha med the brives of Spring

I hear its muse in the word, It eighe winng the vale, Where Summer flowers in beauty stood, It lingers in the state ; "It plays upon the primare banks. And room its meery wing : The decepting mow drop kindly thanks The western breeze of Spring-

Ab! well it knows where visits grow In the lowe and sharty late; ; -It hade its award, like for rice blow And unward speeds again. It wakes the grasses of the field. And they their offsprings bring ; The flowers their sweetest increase yield, To seem the breeze of Spring

The blackbird from the hawilian bush, Emews his levely strain; On toponout broaches stands the thrush, And tunes to throat annua; At close of evening culm and mild, He makes the forestring With pairre wasdnotes, clear and wild-He loves the breeze of Spring

The robin leaves his Winter frends For hedge-rows far awas -Above his money nest he bends And prove his plaintiefe lay. The lark upracing with the light. On merry monatain wing-And hads the breeze of Spring

A hundred staces till the air. The son shines warmly down; Away with sixth idlouding care. And leave the glooms town: Come, roam along the woodputh green, Hear nuture's favorice sorg. Enjoy the neutralizating scene, And woo the breeze of Spring Dublin University Migazine
