do that hostile to the Church and derogatory to the rights of the Sovereign Pontiff. It is quite the fashion even for Catholic politicians to assert, that, though the Church is supreme in spirituals, the State in temporals is absolutely independent of her authority. 'Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's.' As long as the Church keeps within her own province and confines herself to spirituals, we respect her and submit to her authority; in spirituals we even recognize the authority of the Pope, and allow that in them he may do as he pleases; but he has no authority in temporals and in them we will do as we please. Such is the popular doctrine of the day, and of not a few who would take it as a great affront and as downright injustice were we to insinuate that they are but sorry Catholics." "Place no reliance in their hypocritical abuse of the Pope."

"Indeed we can better endure open, avowed Protestantism itself than stingy, narrow-minded and bigot-frozen Gallicanism, always studying to split the difference between Peter and Cæsar, God and the Devil."

Here we see that the Gallicans are denounced for their disposition "to separate religion from politics," for asserting that "the State in temporals is absolutely independent of her [the Romish Church's] authority"; while it is plainly intimated that they are "hypocritical" and but "sorry Catholics."

How could the American party do otherwise than admit the Gallicans of Louisiana. It is right to encourage such men. Carrol and Gaston belonged to that class, and so do Chandler and Tawney at the present time. The Gallicans maintain the doctrines of religious liberty; the Ultramontanes do not. The former constitute "the Gallican heresy," the latter "the Romish hierarchy." The Gallicans in this case smack a little of Protestantism. In admitting the Louisiana delegation, the American party gave a signal proof that it makes no war on the Catholic religion, but that while it is, at all times, ready to affiliate with, and encourage the friends of religious liberty, yet it is ever vigilant and active to scout out, expose and crush every effort, come whence it may, of Romanism or any other ism, to make religion a political engine, or to unite Church and State.

PROSPECTUS
Lincolnton Dispatch.

As the county of Lincoln will at an early day be in the enjoyment of Rail Road facilities connecting her citizens with the rest of mankind, it is manifest to all, that a Public Journal should be established in her midst, affording a medium of communication to her citizens at home, and conveying to, and from them whatever may be desirable and interesting to be known.

The undersigned therefore proposes publishing in the town of Lincolnton, a weekly newspaper under the title of the LINCOLNTON DISPATCH.

This paper will be devoted to imparting information of every kind. Its chief aim will be to promote the cause of Internal Improvement in the largest sense—to foster and encourage all the Industrial arts—to awaken a new spirit in Agriculture, and to afford reliable answers to the Farmers' inquiries that will and must soon be made as to what is the best path to success. It is proposed to elicit discussions on all important subjects as the surest way of establishing truth. This Journal will gather from every point, and present weekly a condensed statement of the news of every kind, so as to be acknowledged as a pleasant and useful companion to every family which it may chance to greet.

Whilst politics will be only a secondary matter, yet they will receive such attention as they deserve, and as Editors, reared in the Old Whig School of Clay and Webster, and believing in the conservative principles of the American Party, they shall editorially advocate their own principles, yet they will not refuse to others of different politics a place for promulgating their sentiments.

It is believed that a paper conducted as this is proposed to be, will be well appreciated, and supported by an active, industrious and inquiring community.

These proposals are issued with the view of ascertaining what support we may expect. If not enough is received, to justify our embarking in the enterprise, then this prospectus closes our labors. Should we however receive the encouragement we expect, then the LINCOLNTON DISPATCH, will be issued at the earliest day practicable.

OUR TERMS of subscription is $2 00 per annum in advance; $2.50 if payment be delayed six months, and $3.00 if not paid until the expiration of the year.

Subscription money not required until the first number has been issued and received. Address, Fink & Krimminger, Lincolnton, N. C.
