There is no pleasure, we believe, more intense, and at the same time profitable, than that afforded on the occasion of a literary festival. It is one in which perons from all the walks of life love to revel; and one which affords gratification to the old as well as the young, because of its purity, innocence and variety. We of visitors at the commencement was nousually small. We do not remember ever to have seen so thin an attendance on the part of the public within the last six years, especially with regard to the ladies, usually the foremost, with honor be it said, to testify by their cheerful presence their appreciation and love of the high and ennobling pleasures incident to such an occasion, as well as their willingness to encourage and promote them. Whatever may have been the cause which contributed to this failure of attendance, we trust that distaste for refined pleasure and amusements, or even a cold indiffernce to them, had nothing to do with it. We had the good fortune to hear the Baccalcurrents Sermon, preached before the day morning and resolved to re-organize. formed; and when the globules or vesi-cloud. It had been said that ministers of high standing and large means, clothed in fine linen and faring sumptuously every day, did not sympathize with those whose salaries are small. To this Dr. Breckinridge was replying. He sconted the idea that ministers lived for money, or desire the luxuries of the world As for himself, he challenged any man to say that he lived more frugally than himself.
