

Poetical.

FOR THE WATCHMAN.
REASONABLE LINES.
A soul in darkness?
A light in gloaming?

Edward Everett as a School-boy Orator.

Meant. Editors.—Mr. Everett honours the eye of the public at the present time, that every thing about him is read with interest.

THE LITTLE ORATOR.

Pray how should I, a little lad,
In speaking make a figure?

But were you wish to love my part,
And say me to be large in art,

Do not let me pass with witless words,
Though all the world be told.

It tell a tale, how former John
A little man not long to be,

And every age, and every year,
We heard and he'd be there.

Said neighbour John to father John,
"Are you a sly old man?"

To speak such words and care upon
A little, unwise old man?

Said father John to nephew John,
"Let me be sly, or you be old."

The little old man will reply,
To keep the tale far from the eye,

The little old man, you think, is I—
I know as by your smile.

And now, my friends, please to excuse
My being and my stammer;

I, for the sake, have done my best,
As you I'll make my masters.

Childhood.—The following beautiful extract will be read with deep interest, especially by the aged, in whose hearts it will find a cordial response:
If there is anything that can warm the chilled feeling, and send the blood bounding through the veins of sober manhood, it must be sympathy with the joyous spirit of childhood.

Life History.—Wishes, a man's life is like a garden. The more it is cultivated, the more it yields. The more it is neglected, the more it is overgrown.

her; low her heart strengthens its self-show strong in her purpose. Place her in the heat of battle—give her a child, a bird, anything she loves or hates, to protect—and see her, as in a relative instance, raise her white arms as a shield, as her own blood crimson her upturned forehead, praying for life to protect the helpless. Transient her in the dark places of the earth—awaken her energies to action, and her breath becomes a healing—her presence a blessing. She disputes, such by such, the stride of the stalking pestilence, when man, the strong and brave, shrinks away, pale and affrighted. Misfortune darts her not; she weaves away a life of silent endurance, and goes forward with less timidity than her mortal. In prosperity she is a bud full of improved odds, waiting but for the wind of adversity to scatter them a-broad—pure gold, valuable, but united in the furnace. In short, woman is a miracle—a mystery, the centre from which radiates the great orb of existence.

THE SENSIBILITIES OF FOOD.
That there are curiosities in human food is demonstrated by a single glance at any catalogue of barbarous bills of fare. Man's food has been wonderfully ingenious from its infancy, in the concoction of the various dishes, and in the preparation of the various kinds of meat.

The Roman Catholic editor of the Boston Pilot bitterly insists, that wherever there is a Protestant chaplain in the United States there shall also be a Roman Catholic chaplain. If he is such a very great friend to equal religious rights, why then he should be a Roman Catholic chaplain within the Roman dominions, there also shall be a Protestant chaplain.
