BALTIMORE, June 25.

John P. Kane, late Marshal of Police for the city of Baltimore, and among the most ardent friends of the Southern Confederacy in that populous city, was arrested at the Hotel House last night, while en route for Virginia. All the papers and letters about him were taken. The arrest was effected while Mr. Kane was in bed.

Mr. Kane is universally popular in Baltimore, and nothing that Old Abe's henchmen could have done would induce any greatly oppressed people to revolt.

The following dispatch was received yesterday, by a navy officer, telegraphed to Gen. McClellan as to its authenticity:

Reported arrangement between Government and Kentucky.

The Front at Burnt—Enough Hunderd Killed and Wounded—How it was Done.—The Nashville Gazette has received the following "special" from Washington, dated June 19, 1861:

A Government messenger has at last arrived, giving the official account of the battle at Great Bethel.

It is now ascertained beyond a doubt, that the Federal loss will not fall short of one thousand eight hundred, killed and wounded.

The report to General Scott says that Gen. Picayune Butler is not to blame for the terrible slaughter; he was fully two miles in the rear.

The victory to the Southerners was owing to their great mistake on their part. It is positively asserted that their cannon were charged with ball cartridge, and although unknown to those who loaded the guns, Magruder was cognizant of the fact. The North Carolina regiment, it is also believed, used powder and ball.

This conclusion has been arrived at by the entire engineer corps, who state that shot, shell, Minie balls, and particularly rifle-carbon balls, will kill when properly directed, at least five times out of ten.

The report caused great excitement here. The Department snorted; General Scott wanted to curse, but was too feeble; and Abe Lincoln got most gloriously drunk. The latter individual wanted the matter suppressed, but owing to his overflowing condition, it leaked out, and I hastened to forward you the particulars.
