Adventures of a Negro in the Yankee Lines.—Daniel Boon, a negro boy, the property of Capt. J. J. Thomas, of the Richmond Hussars, was captured by the enemy, about two weeks since, while the company was on vidette duty at Shirley. The morning after his capture he was taken before the Colonel of a Yankee regiment, who sent him to the General's headquarters. Here he was invited in, made to take a seat, and, as he says, "had a sociable conversation with the General. Upon being questioned by the General, he told that official that the woods were full of infantry, artillery, and cavalry, that Beauregard's and Jackson's troops reached from there to Richmond, and that, instead of "falling back," we were bringing more troops down. After giving him cheese, crackers, coffee, and sugar, he was asked if he wanted to go back, and on replying yes, he was immediately sent to the guard tent. Here they took down a minute description of him, name of owner, &c., and the next morning set him to burning brush. After firing a pile of brush he threw on a lot of straw, which created a dense smoke, and plowing this between himself and the guard he put out. He had not gone far, however, until he came upon the encampment of a Pennsylvania regiment, and, meeting with another negro, learned the number of the regiment and the name of its commandant, and thus prepared he approached the pickets, and told them that he was a servant of the Colonel and that he was sent out to pick him some black berries. He was passed, but enjoined to hurry back. After several other adventures and narrow escapes, he succeeded in reaching our reserves, much to the astonishment and gratification of all, who had given him up for lost.—Rich. Dispatch.

DIED:

At the residence of his father, Major James E. Kerr, on the 29th July, 1862, of Typhoid Fever, his eldest son, Lieut. James H. Kerr, of the 1st Regiment, N. C. State Troops, in the 20th year of his age.

Thus are we again called upon to record the loss of another brave, generous and noble man, who at the first call of his State for volunteers gallantly enrolled himself as a private, which position he filled with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of all, until he was appointed Lieutenant, discharging the duties of that office with energy and fidelity.

But a few weeks ago, he was in the enjoyment of health and vigor, and his temperate and active habits promised a long and useful life. After passing through the battle at Richmond, with only a slight wound, he contracted the fever in camp, and reached home in time to die under the parental roof. He was a dutiful son, an affectionate brother, and a friend to all. He was beloved in every relation of life. During his illness he received the most constant attention of physicians and friends, but death, the destroyer, had marked him for his victim and blasted all the fond hopes of his friends. We shall miss thee Jimmie, but may we when called away from earth be able to leave behind us a memory as stainless as thine. M. S. N.

At Richmond, Va., very suddenly, July 29th, SAMUEL F. GARDNER, a member of the Rowan Rifle Guard, Co. K., 4th Reg't. N. C. T., of heart dropsy, aged 26 years. He had been quite unwell for about four weeks: but at the time of his death was thought to be improving. He had gone out to take a walk, and fell dead. Mr. Gardner was a faithful and brave soldier, and fought through several of the hard battles near Richmond. He leaves a widowed mother and other kindred and friends to drop for him the tear of affection.

Second Auditor's Office,
Richmond, June 24, 1862.

Regulations for the Payment of Claims for Arrears of Pay due deceased Soldiers, per Act, approved February 12, 1862.

The first section of the Act is as follows:

The Congress of the Confederate States do enact, That the pay and allowances due to any deceased volunteer non-commissioned officer, musician or private, in the army of the Confederate States, shall be paid to the widow of the deceased, if living, if not, to the children, if any; and in default of widow, of children, to the father, if living, and if not, to the mother of such deceased volunteer, and payment will be made accordingly.

1. If the child or children be minors, payment will be made to the guardian, upon the production of the proper certificate, under the seal of the court.

2. The claimant herein must produce his or her affidavit, and that of one disinterested person, stating the relationship, and that there is no other person entitled to claim. For instance, if the claimant be a mother, the affidavit must state that there is living neither wife, child or father of the deceased; if the father, that there is neither child or wife; and if the child, that there is no wife. The magistrate administering the oath should certify to the credibility of the witness, and the clerk of the court should certify under the seal that he is such magistrate.

3. These regulations do not apply to commissioned officers, except when the amount due does not exceed one hundred dollars and there is no administration.

☞ Claims prepared in compliance with the foregoing instructions, and transmitted to this office by mail, or otherwise, will receive as prompt attention as the business of the office will allow.
