The Watchman. SALISBURY, N. C.: MONDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 6, 1862. The Ticket agents of the N. C. Railroad, it is said, have been instructed not to take Confederate 20s, 50s, and 100s. This is wrong, because it is calculated to depreciate Confederate notes. We have, at some little trouble, made out a list of prices at this place, the examination of which is not profitable to the public, cannot fail to interest them. It will be observed that the prices of many articles are in excess, relatively to other things. In some cases that excess has a tolerable reason in its favor. But in others, there is manifest extortion.

The Charlotte (N. C.) Whig, indulges in a little jubilation at the prospect of having—what do you suppose? A market house! for the accommodation of that enterprising and well governed town. It has had none, strange to say, notwithstanding few towns of its size have better government or are more liberal in out-lays for the public convenience. The Whig gives reasons for its rejoicing, entirely independent of the idea of having another public building added to the property of the town, but anticipates, sandy conveniences and advantages with the prospective establishment. We hope its expectations may all be more than realized, though, without meaning to dampen its joy, we can assure it every community in the possession of a market house do consider themselves extremely happy on that account, so far as such an establishment is calculated to promote that feeling. Our own town is a case in point. There are very many here who regard the market house, (and we have a pretty fine one) only as a means of oppression. They complained that it was built without their consent, and the heavy cost of it packed on them against their will; that its regulations are too restrictive, and upon the whole is a nuisance. In one respect it favors monopolies. The meat stalls are taken up by three or four parties to the exclusion of every body else, and being interested in keeping up the price of meats, they charge a good fee against country men and others who may bring in beef to retail there, not being allowed to retail elsewhere in town until the afternoon. Competition, so far as the sellers are concerned, is an excluded idea. They sell by rule not to undersell each other; and if a man does so, (as in the case of an individual we could name,) they "get after him" directly—not to tell him, to be sure, but to overcome his generous promise by remonstrances, persuasions, and efforts to buy out his live stock. These are only some of the complaints; so friend Whig, don't be too overjoyous about that market house in Charlotte, for fear you might hereafter have similar causes for wishing it a pile of ruins.

Gen. BULL NELSON is certain dead. The Yellow Fever in Wilmington shows no diminution in the number of cases, but is reported to yield more freely to treatment. BULLS has been removed from the command of the Federal army in Kentucky. Congress is discussing measures for retaliating against the Lincolnites when Lincoln shall attempt to enforce his abolition proclamation. There are in Congress some advocates for the black flag. DIVISION NEAR MATINESS VA. Sept. 23, 1862. MA. BURKE:—The 46th Reg. was in the fight near Sharpsburg Md.—we double quicked to get in the fight and consequently had to throw away our knapsacks, blankets, &c. We held our ground the night and day after the battle, leaving the field the next night. On our return we did not come near enough to the place where we had piled our knapsacks to get them, and our Quarter Master was not able to get them in the confusion. Company B of this Regiment is composed of men from Rowan and Burke Counties, and I appeal to our friends in these Counties to send them blankets or quilts enough to protect them from the cold weather, which may very soon be expected. All articles should be directed to Rev. T. L. Troy, care of Wm. Hay Esq., Goldsboro N. C. and should reach there by the 14th of October. Company B behaved very handsomely and I am also glad to say suffered very little. Capt. N. N. Fleming, was wounded, but not severely in the leg—Corporal C. A. Barringier is missing—Privates C. A. Waggoner and H. C. Owens were very slightly wounded and are now on duty.—The other few casualties were among the Burke men—Private James T. Petron in the arm, John Crawley very slightly wounded and now on duty. These are all the casualties in the company—I saw a Baltimore paper, to-day which admits that "the carriage was awful" and that the Yankees had ten Generals killed and wounded. I have not time to write at length. Very Respectfully W. L. SAVANNAH. Major 46th Reg. N. C. T. Send in the blankets.
