

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Articles for this column must be dropped in the Post Office, addressed to "A. W. M."—Box 88.

On the 1st day of November 1862, TOM-MIE, son of Thos. J. and Kate Foster, died in Salisbury, aged 20 months and 10 days.

Thus while the last beautiful flowers are dying and the trees are dropping their faded leaves to shroud them, fond hearts have been called to surrender a precious treasure to the grave.

"We don't forget you, darling. Safe in the lovely land, We know a crown is on your brow, A hush within your hand."

"We don't forget you, darling. Wherever we may rove, You still shall be our polar star— To point to realms above."

For the Children's Column. BEHAVIOR IN CHURCH.

I would impress upon my little readers the truth that their behavior in church speaks more about their qualities of head and heart and show more of the faithfulness or unfaithfulness of their parents than almost anything else.

Always comply with the rules of the congregation in which you worship. If they kneel—you should kneel too: If they stand you should also stand.

Never laugh or put on a light and mirthful expression in church.

Never turn round to gaze at any one who comes in after you have taken your seat.

Do not stare about at the people in the church.

Listen to the minister and look at him so that he will know that you listen. The minister is often delighted by little bright, innocent eyes peeping at him in childish beauty and interest.

Do not yawn in church.

Be sure you do not go to sleep in church.

Never go out of the church during the service unless you are compelled to do so. It is a sure mark of bad raising to break either of these last two rules.

Never talk in church.

Be as quiet and move about as little as possible—during the service.

Show to all that you know you are in the holy sanctuary of your Heavenly Father and remember that it is your duty when there to be serious and prayerful.

For the Children's Column. SELF-WILL.

A little girl who had been trained in the ways of religion, by a parent who was kind but judiciously firm, as she sank to rest in peaceful reliance on a Saviors love, affectionately thanked her beloved mother for all her tender care and kindness; but added, I thank you more than all, for having subdued my self-will.

BLIND GIRL—POWER OF THE BIBLE.

A little girl had been attacked with a severe pain in the head, which ended in blindness. She was taken to an eminent oculist, who pronounced her incurable. She wished to know what the doctor said about her state, and her mother told her. "What, mother!" exclaimed the child, "am I never more to see the sun, nor the beautiful fields, nor you my dear mother, nor my father? She wrung her hands, and wept bitterly. Nothing seemed to yield her the slightest comfort still her mother, taking a pocket Bible from the table, placed it in her hands. "What is this, mother?" inquired the disconsolate little girl. "It is the Bible, my child." Immediately a score of its consolatory passages presented themselves to her mind. She paused, turned her poor, benighted eyeballs toward the ceiling, while an angelic expression played on her countenance, and then as if filled with the holy Spirit, breathed forth an impassioned, but scarcely audible whisper—"Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven."

RELiance UPON GOD.

The Chattanooga Rebel has the following:

Nothing is more evident in this war than that those Generals who put their trust in God are the most fortunate and successful. Almost every victory has been won under the lead of Generals who feared God, but not man, whilst almost every defeat has been under Generals who were not God-fearing and God-serving men.

Lee and Jackson are the two great Generals of the war, by common consent, and they are the two men most remarkable for their religious elevation. Beauregard, too, who, we are satisfied, is one of the great men of this revolution is a man who feels his dependence on an Almighty Power.

South Carolina Troops.—We learn by statements in South Carolina papers that that State has altogether but fifteen thousand soldiers in Virginia and in Bragg's army. We are surprised at this showing, because we thought that South Carolina had at least thirty thousand men in Virginia and in the Kentucky army.

North Carolina, we think, has very near fifty thousand men in Virginia alone. She has 53 organized regiments in service, besides a number of companies of Rangers. We take pleasure in making this statement for the especial benefit of those who are in the habit of slandering and sneering at the old North State.

The Speculators.—The speculators and extortioners are chattering it on every side. Not only are they considered enemies to our cause, but worse enemies even, than the wily and powerful foe against whom we are openly contending. They therefore receive merited abuse and denunciation in private and in public.

Officers out of Place.—A correspondent of the Mississippi writes what no doubt has occurred to the minds of many readers.

It is astonishing, disheartening, mortifying, to observe at every railroad station, in every village, in every city, at every hotel, eating house and drinking house, crowds of officers in the Confederate States service, paid from the public Treasury, honored with titles, entrusted with authority, depended upon for the defence of the country, who are lounging loafing, idling, loitering away their time under one or another of a thousand pretences, while true men are in the field with harness on, battling with the invader.
