mond resert with defaut indignation. It must however, be the confession of every man, who mingles with the masses, that the charge is true to some extent. I refer not now to those ignoble wretches in open re-volt against the State and Government, but more particularly to a class of trailors in our dst. I refer to him, whose object, whose God, is gain, be it acquired in any way, even at the sacrifice of his country's

It is an alarming fact, that the Confederate commenced by Asserted by Proposition of best which could be devised by the wisdom of our national counsellors, the first and greatest support of our political fabric, is decaying, and will be a complete failure, if the machinations of a disloyal class, to whom I refer, be not met by prompt and summary action on the part of the Government and people. It is but too tree, that many of the wives and children of those poor but nobly patriotic men, who are covered with the dust of a score of battle-fields, who have exposed their bodies as a living wall against the invaders of our country, are threatened with suffering from want, during the remainder of the war. But is there any good reason for their suffering? With a few exceptions, they have some money from their husbands, or brothers or sons in the army, and generally enough, with some assistance from the country, to supply their some as the country. their wants, if they can buy subsistence at reasonable rates. But, if this infamous blow at our currency be not stayed, it is to be feared that, in the course of two months, it will be impossible for any one, private or public, to buy any thing with Confederate notes -And where is the cause of so sudden and great a depreciation? I would point you to that class of men in our community to whom the people are indebted, large holders of notes. It may not be the case generally, but it is a disgraceful fact, that in the upper part of this disgraceful fact, that in the upper part of this and the lower part of Iredell county, the re-fusal of Confederate notes in payment of debt is an every day occurrence. Why, sir, in the community spoken of, a merchant, (or one who formerly engaged in the business,) who has large clauns upon three-fourths of the citizens of the surrounding country, a man, (to say the best I can of him,) whose judgment on monetary matters has ever been consulted in his community, and therefore capable of doing great good or evil in the present case, I say, sir, that this man, (call hun truitor if you will,) has refused, positively refused, to receive the present currency in payment of debt, except at a discount of 25 per cent. And what will be the result of this speculation in our currency? I expect, in a few days, to hear of his debtors refusing to receive Confederate hotes for their corn, wheat and bacon. This is a necessary consequence. If my creditor refuses to receive a certain currency in payment of my note, I should certainly be compelled to refuse it in exchange for any thing I ald have to sell. Only let this treasonable conduct become more general, and, in the name of our country, I ask, what will become of the wives and children of our poor soldiers? Even supposing them to have money, under so general a depreciation, it would be as trash in their hands. Those who hold the articles of subsistence, would refuse to receive it. The soldiers helpless dependents at home are reduced to want. And what then becomes of our army? Is it supposed that the soldier will stand to his post when he knows that his family is suffering from want? Such patriotisin would I believe, be very rarely met with. Many may be willing to sacrifice their own lives upon the altar of their country; but, in few, if any, cases, will be found a patriotism so unselfish, so disinterested, as would "stand to the colors" in the face of a suffering family In a word, with a general and rumous depreciation of our currency, comes the total disorganization of our grand army; and, with it the loss of every thing accomplished by two years of bloody war, and the sad disappointment of every hope which has nerved. the arm of the patriot in battling for his liberties. Our currency once ruined, and our "Confederate States of America" can never be established as a government, or recogniz-ed-as such in the family of nations. He who ruins the credit of our Government strikes at the very heart of our national existence, and he who does it knowingly, (and therefore in-tentionally,) is a trailor of the blackest dye, is worse than he who takes up arms against his country. I would hold up such a man to the execration of an indignant public; nay, more, I would throw wide open the doors of the prison, and give him a hearty welcome. During the last few months, every patriot's heart has felt light in the supposed prospect of a speedy and honorable peace. And, in the comparison of the relative strength and success of the contending armies, certainly we see a prospect bright indeed. It has been said that the slarkest hour is just before dawn." And more it not be said with equal truth, that night is ever upon the heels of day? Is this the dawning of the bright day of a permanent peace, or is it a fatal delusion of the mental vision, to be quickly undeceived by the night of dark disappointment? I am not one of those, who habitually indulge in glowing forebodings of our future, but I would like to point to an evil, already, of alarming extent, which, if not checked, toust prove the ruin of our country.

The deceased, when quite young, connected herself with the Presbyterian Church at Rocky River, in Mecklenburg county; since that time, the family moved to Rowan county, where she was received into the church of Thyatira, of which she was a consistent member, until God removed her to her new home, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest. The deceased had but few equals. She had been the child of affliction for several years, which she bore with patience and resignation-she had her lamp trimmed, and burning brilliantly, when the messenger of death came and summoned her to her new home, where she now reigns triumphant over death. The relatives and friends of the deceased mourn not as those who have no hope, their loss is her eternal
