

that perpetual monopolies would not be created by them. He was strongly of opinion that Parliament ought to insert into those bills a clause giving to government or to Parliament a power to revise the enactments of the bills at any future time. Great injustice was done by the passing of many of the bills, and immense inconvenience and expense occasioned to many parties. If the proprietors were to be permitted to be constituted perpetual monopolising bodies, the only way of ever getting the better of them would be by making fresh lines of road at great expense to the public, and inconvenience to proprietors. He had had for some days a scheme under consideration for having rail road bills placed under the control of Parliament at any future period, and he hoped the proposed third reading would be postponed for a few days, that he might have time to mature the scheme. He thought it a measure that Government ought to take into their hands; and if they did so, he should be happy to share in the responsibility of bringing forward such a measure."

NEW GOODS.
THE Subscriber after returning her most cordial thanks for the very liberal encouragement she has hitherto received at the hands of her patrons, begs leave to announce through the medium of the Press, that she has just returned from New York, and is hourly expecting the arrival of her purchases. With due deference to the public, truth and justice to herself and Goods compels her to say that, A MORE NEAT AND Valuable Assortment,
Was never offered in this section, and that they surpass any of her former purchases as much as the effulgence of the sun does the pallid light of the moon—and she would simply suggest to those persons who are desirous of procuring articles in her line of business, of the most fashionable style and at the cheapest rates, to favor her with a call ere they purchase elsewhere, or they may sincerely regret their non-compliance with this intimation. She thinks it highly probable that among her assortment may be found articles vastly superior both in style and texture to any in this place. Believing they will be in great demand, and relying in the truth of the old saying that, they who live for others live the more for themselves, she assures her friends that her prices for those Goods will not be more exorbitant on that account, than if every store in town was filled to overflowing with similar ones. The following list of articles comprise her Stock:—
