

TARBOROUGH:

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1843.

Senator Haywood—We noticed with pleasure the honors shown to one of our Senators in Congress, the Hon. Wm. H. Haywood, during his recent travel in the Western part of the State.

The speech delivered by him to the citizens of Mecklenburg, who complimented him with a public dinner, is characterized by so much good sense, and exhibits, in such glowing colors the deceptive and ruinous policy of the Whigs, that we would gladly grace our columns with it, but for its length.

The first reading of this speech satisfied us of its superior merits, and we know, if submitted to the reason and fair judgment of the Whigs themselves, that many of them would enquire and solve for themselves the question, "what have we gained by Whig measures?" and if we had not this evidence of its merits, the effect produced on the Whigs, their denunciations and wrath poured out upon it, and their zealous efforts to parry and counteract its effects, are convincing proofs, that its blows are felt. The fluttering of wounded pigeons shows the effective aim of the shot.

The Whig Editors may resort to their usual tactics, of abusing and misrepresenting both speech and author; but they dare not republish it, or undertake a fair criticism of it. They professed on his election to be proud of it—preferred him to any other Democrat, and before he had taken his seat, or given the first vote, he is proclaimed as an upstart and hypocrite. His speech is denounced as demagogical, without citing any instance in it bearing the slightest tincture of it. Without attempting to explain why, they say they are ashamed of him. No doubt their sense of shame is strongly developed, at their own exposure and deformities, which has been shown by a master's hand. Their shame and confusion is at their own exposure, and not the Orator's.

But they have singled out one expression in his speech, which seems to have shocked their whole nervous system; and for the want of some other point of attack, have twisted and tortured it into a hideous deformity—that ill-fated expression which has to bear the brunt for the whole speech, that he called himself "the Senator of his party." By misrepresenting the application of it, and making it refer to a different meaning, they have sought to give it a shocking signification. Unless they claim him as the Senator of their party, or their principles, they ought not to object to the expression. But the manner in which the expression was used, and its plain obvious meaning, as indicated by its reference to the subject he was then speaking of, frees it from any illiberal or improper meaning or bearing. He was speaking of the possible dissensions in the Democratic ranks in the selection of a candidate for the Presidency, and the preferences of the party for different persons—and declined to declare any preference himself, because being "the Senator of the party," and not of any portion or fragment of it, he desired to encourage no breach, but to keep the party united; to dictate no choice to others, or to take side in the dispute. He preferred their union and harmony, and to represent their united counsels. It was in this sense he called himself "the Senator of his party," and there was no impropriety in it.

The Whigs seeing their only chance of success is a division of the Democratic party; try every means to effect it; and nothing would have pleased them better than for Mr. Haywood to have called himself the Senator of a part of his party. They cared not, whether the Van Buren, Calhoun, or Johnson part. Their fingers ache to foment a family quarrel among us, and because Mr. H. is not weak or treacherous enough to subvert their purposes, he is to be abused. No, Mr. Haywood has all his life, both in public and private, been a devoted Democrat, honest, true, and consistent—and the great Democratic principles he has always so zealously sustained, he has recently been selected by the voice of his State to represent in the great councils of the country. And we have every confidence that the duty will be ably and faithfully performed.

And without praising or censuring him in advance, we are perfectly willing to abide the test of time for his conduct and ability.

The cool weather does not seem to check the sickness in this section, which prevails to an extent unprecedented for years—happily it seldom has a fatal termination. We copy from the Washington Republican, of the last and present weeks, the following list of deaths. It will be seen, by an article below from that paper, that it is now admitted the Yellow Fever is prevailing there.

YELLOW FEVER.

That the Yellow Fever is in Washington, seems to us to be useless longer to deny. Some few cases that have occurred of late settles that point beyond contradiction. We thus write that our neighbours may be in possession of all the facts in the case. Although we are thus plain, we say at the same time that much of the sickness here is nothing more than the bilious fever. And by way of giving the whole truth, we will state that there was 26 deaths in this town from the 31st of August to the 4th of October inst., among the white population; there have also been some few deaths among the negroes. Of the 26 deaths, 17 we feel warranted in asserting, were of yellow fever.

There seems to be much difference of opinion in regard to the disease, whether it be contagious or not; of this we can say nothing, having but little acquaintance with its nature.

Our people are many of them out of town, and our population much thinned. 55 families had left from last Friday to last Tuesday night, when we made our estimate. We indulge the hope, therefore, that the disease will abate in severity as well as extent. The weather was very unfavorable the latter part of last week, but is now quite the reverse; this morning (Wednesday) a fire felt very comfortable. We have heard of no new case since Sunday, & most of those that are now on the sick list are understood to be convalescent. We do not think there is that danger in our friends coming to town as many apprehend there is,—so we say to our neighbors, come along, and get such necessaries as you may want.

When the Yellow Fever was first reported to be in this town, about four weeks since, by Doctor Jesse G. Bryan, a highly esteemed and worthy young gentleman of the medical fraternity, the Doctor was censured for thus expressing himself, notwithstanding he confined his opinion to those cases which he was called to administer to. He was not only censured but was the subject of ridicule by some, and his opinions treated with contempt. But since the disease has more fully developed itself of its true color, the inhabitants generally are disposed to believe that Doctor Bryan's opinion was deserving of equally as much credence as the opinion of others. He has added no little to his reputation as a physician, although it has been done in a way which he undoubtedly regrets. He would much rather have suffered the odium of ignorance, which some have accused him of, than to have witnessed the prevalence of a disease so awful in our midst, slaying down almost daily and without warning, our most worthy and enterprising citizens.

We have thought the foregoing was due to Dr. Bryan, but we wish it to be understood that we harbour no unkind feelings towards any one of the medical fraternity, nor would we be instrumental in casting the least censure upon any of them. Such is not our intention, but we aim to "let justice be done, though the heavens fall."

Extract of a letter, dated

GREENVILLE, N. C., September 29th, 1843.

"The Commissioners of Greenville have passed an Ordinance, prohibiting all intercourse, either directly or indirectly, between this place and Washington, for thirty days from this date, being satisfied that Yellow Fever or some other dangerous disease prevails there, and have made any infraction of the ordinance a penalty of fifty dollars. I mention this to prevent any of your citizens from getting into difficulty."

Thank you, neighbour, we will try to shun Greenville, for we hear awful accounts of the health of that place occasionally! But you have acted right.

From the Democratic Signal.

The Convention.—The necessity on the part of the Democratic Party of North Carolina of holding a State Convention to nominate a candidate for Governor—to appoint delegates to the National Convention, and to decide upon the manner in which this State shall be represented, and how her vote shall be given upon the question of the Presidency, is now plainly seen and felt by all. The different counties are hastening to respond to the Democratic Meeting in Wake, and we have reason to hope that there will be such a display of unanimity and mutual concession among all members of the Democratic family as will show the federal party that it has nothing to expect from dissension and discord in our ranks; that contending for great and vital principles, Federalism is our worst foe, and all our ammunition shall be expended upon it. It may not expect to retreat sily, or to attack successfully under cover from our own ranks. Let it be assured that all personal preferences will be forgotten, and there will be a union, if of no other and dearer kind, an union of policy and interest against a common enemy. A Convention will be the first step to regular organization, and the sooner that organization be effected, the better for our party and the cause. The machinations of whiggery have already begun, as for instance, it is apparent that by diminishing circulation of money it would force the people to fall in with its current in favor of a Bank. This is but one stratagem; it is right that these machinations should be met. Thorough organization is the best weapon with which the combat can be held. We would suggest to our friends as speedy an assembling of the Convention as the convenience of the people will allow.

"PAYING FOR THE WHISTLE"

Mr. Editor: The Editor of the North State Whig, quoting from the Philadelphia Forum, states, that Mr. Arrington "must have expended at least $5,000 in buying the influence of the keepers of grog shops and other such establishments."—At 39 cents per gallon $5,000 would buy 12,820 gallons of brandy, or 102,560 pints, or 420,240 gills,—a gill of brandy, would be by the most of brandy drinkers, considered a large drink, and as Mr. Arrington received but 4813 votes, it follows by a simple rule in arithmetic, that he must have treated each of his voters to eighty-five stiff glasses of brandy, or near enough to make each of them drunk every day for a month previous to the day of the election. This is the account drawn of our Representative and the men who elected him, and sent forth to the world endorsed by a miserable letter writer in Carteret county, and his coadjutor in your town: men who know as little about the moral condition of the Democracy of this district, and of the great causes that produced Mr. Stanly's defeat, as they do about charity and good will to their fellow men. Can it be necessary to Mr. Stanly's vindication, that such wanton calumnies and malevolent slanders should be perpetrated against his political opponents? Will nothing quiet the stomachs of his disappointed supporters, and heal his wounded pride but the utter prostitution of truth and justice? What a lamentable state of things! How desperate must that cause be which requires such unworthy means for its support. Let these men beware how they play upon the feelings of their Democratic fellow citizens, they may sow the wind but reap the whirlwind. The "State of Edgecombe" has taught what the aroused energies of the Democracy can do. Let them profit by the lesson. The unfinching yeomanry of that ever glorious county was on the tongue of every Whig willing in the district, compared to "walking brandy barrels," crowded over as the conquered, held up to ridicule in every possible light, and what was the consequence? A voice of thunder was heard on the 3rd of August last, carrying dismay and defeat into the ranks of their revilers, "the conqueror was conquered," and the banner of Democracy floated in triumph over the district.—So let the opponents of Democracy learn wisdom from experience, bridle their tongues and pens, and above all things study well the lesson taught in the book of Exodus, chap. xx, ver. xvi, to which I refer them for further information.—NEUSE.

From the Raleigh Standard.

Wake Superior Court.—The Superior Court for Wake county is now in session in this City—his Honor Judge Bailey presiding. The Attorney General with a most commendable industry, got through with the criminal docket on Monday, so as to enable the Court to proceed upon the civil docket on Tuesday. On Tuesday morning James Terry, who had been acquitted at a former term on the ground of insanity, but who had nevertheless been in close prison for some time, was brought up, took the insolvent oath in discharge of costs, and was set at liberty. James Pulley, whose term of imprisonment had expired, was also discharged on taking the oath.

Caught Again.—That "same old coon" Hardy Carroll has been again arrested. He was brought in apparently in a very feeble condition, and the Sheriff says he must break strong irons before he escapes again.—ib.

From the Raleigh Register.

The Influenza.—This disease, or as some term it, the "Tyler Grippe," has been very impartial in its calls upon our Citizens, making no distinction in age, sex, or condition. We have heard of no case in which it has proved fatal, though it is quite distressing.—The weather continues very variable—changing from warm to cold, and vice versa—to which cause may be attributed this prevailing disease.

Encouraging.—The receipts of the past summer months for travel over the Wilmington and Roanoke Rail Road were considerably greater than those of the corresponding months of last season, notwithstanding there was in the mean time a reduction on the charges of nearly thirty per cent. The increase is attributed in part to the reduced fare, and otherwise; to the bettered times.—Wilm Chron.

Washington Market, Sept. 28.—Corn-Wholesale, $2 75 per barrel. Bacon—8 cents. Lard, 8 to 9 cents. Naval stores. New dip, $1 85; Old, $1 70. Scrape, 75 cents.—Rep.

His neighborhood has also lost a conscientious man of business, in the prime of life.

The pale faced monster claims at his demand, And man before him is but dross or sand; The tall, the great, the noble must Lie down and sleep in nother dust. Thus none can flatter, or can stay his arm; Not gold or silver ever could him charm; But when commission'd in his coach he rides, Destructive pains and fevers are always by his side.—Com.
