Washington, $\overline{N . C}$. July 18th, 1844

 Mr. Holden.Dear Sir: You have probably heard, the discontinuance of the "Republican," this town. If not, 1 now inform you the fact; and I do so with profound regre for I believe the permanency of a well conducted Democratic paper in this Distric highly necessary. Our organ of communication having ceased, I have thought it would not be out of the way to drop you line on the subject of our party and pros pects in this seet hopes of a better state of things in future.

Our worthy Electoral candidate. lavis Toole, Esq'r-a man whom the dressed a respectable audience at the Cour House in this town on Friday evening last, 12th instant. He spoke for about two hours and the best I ever heard fall from his lips He dwelt on the Bank, Tariff, and the va rious questions which divide the wo great parties of the Union, and was most happy in his remarks on the Bank and Tariff questions. He proved, from Mr. Clay's own speeches, the dangers to be apprehen ded from the establishment of a Bank. He proved also, from the same source that he, Hexry Clay, the Whigocand for the Presidency, was actually in favo of the identieal thing the whigs accuse the olly for me to attempt to give you a sketeh of his remarks: to aim at such a thing would only be doing our candidate injus tice. His remarks were deep, sound, chaste, and pointed. His audience were power, who have ondy to appear on the stage of publication to receive a brilliant award of fame; and that the powers those whose names are already pronoun ced with respect by lips of wisest censure are capable of more and still higher exer tion than has yet been called forth. It believed, too, that the demand for literary production in this country, especially the periodical channel, exceeds the suppl
