MISCELLANEA.

From the Union.

Massachusetts.—Among the resolutions adopted by the democratic State Convention recently assembled at Faneuil Hall, Boston, was the following:

"Resolved, That we congratulate the democracy of the country upon the passage of that measure of justice and equity, the Revenue Tariff," &c. &c.

The Mormons.—A correspondent of the St. Louis Republican under date Sept. 18, says:

The Mormon war is at last ended. On Wednesday evening, the Quincy committee prevailed on the Mormons to surrender; and yesterday, at three o'clock the Anties marched into, and took possession of the city of Nauvoo. The Mormons stipulated to leave forthwith, or as fast as they can possibly get away, except a committee of five, who are to remain to dispose of the property yet belonging to the community. No property has been, or is to be destroyed—although a strong disposition existed, with many of the Anties, to destroy the Temple. They fear it will be a beacon light to lure the Mormons back. By refraining from violent measures the Anties have saved themselves from a great deal of reproach.

A gentleman who left Nauvoo yesterday, at 2 o'clock, said the Mormons were leaving as fast as they could get away. Yesterday was a happy day for the citizens of Hancock county, as peace is now permanently restored to it.

Some ten days ago, (says the "Selma (Ala.) Reporter,") Mr. Robert Drury, of this County, shot a Hawk, which had suspended to its wing, a Card, on which was written, "S. Calvert, Jackson, North Carolina; August 1, 1846."

The Milwaukee Gazette announces the arrival of the steamer Empire, thus: "She had 969 paying passengers on her list, and was filled with freight. About 475 passengers and 60 tons merchandise, furniture, &c. were landed at this port."

Remedy for chills and fevers, or fever and ague.—Take one pint of sweet milk and one large tablespoonful of ground ginger, mixed thoroughly, and heated over the fire as warm as it can be drunk, when the chill comes on or commences. Repeat the dose once or twice, if necessary, and the cure will be effected.

N. B.—If the system be costive, an aperient may be necessary in order to prepare it properly for the above prescription.

This is the most accessible, the cheapest, the most efficacious, and the speediest remedy in the world. As this is the usual season for the prevalence of that disease, I do myself the honor to furnish you with the above recipe.

Stewart's Anti-matrimonial Establishment.—To the unlearned and unsophisticated in city matters, the heading of this article will be about as intelligible as so much Greek; but to the married gentlemen of this city, particularly those who have linked their fortunes to "ladies fair," who have been educated in a school where in economy has not been taught as a distinct branch, the above language is not only plain English, but would be fully subscribed to as true, if Dame Fortune should in one of her freaks, leave them in the enjoyment of a single blessedness once again.

Stewart, our readers will recollect, is the rich merchant (said to be worth millions) who some twenty or thirty years ago came to this city from Dutchess county, in this State, and commenced business in a small way as a retailer of thread and needles. By strict regard to the principle of economy, he rose, step by step in wealth, until he was acknowledged the Prince of Merchants, which title he still retains. It has been, and is quite enough to say of a lady's dress, cloak, mantilla, edifice, cape, collar, yoke, brocade scarf or other garment, that it was purchased at Stewart's; and unless Miss Admiration can have one of Stewart's latest, mama will not have the pleasure of witnessing the triumph of the daughter's attractions over the distingue moustached, lately arrived. Count Blowynoseoff, or attache to some foreign legation, whether French, Spanish, Italian, Polish, Russian, Prussian, Chinese, or Turkish, it matters not, so that he is from the other side of the water; and thus the purse-strings of the toiling papa are almost daily pulled, and many times to the detriment of the simple minded and credulous creditors, who not unfrequently are made ultimately indirectly to pay the bill. The old store of Stewart, opposite the Park, with the almost illegible sign A. T. Stewart over the door, the very dinginess of which seemed to speak this language by Stewart: "I am too well and favorably known to make it necessary to require the aid of a sign to get patronage," the truth of which may be verified by reference to the married men in high life, who have almost daily, in passing the old store, been seized with a sudden fit of ague. We do not believe much in mesmerism, but we hold to a sort of sympathetic influence like the case described. But we think we hear our readers say how does the splendid marble palace of a store corner of Reade street and Broadway, tally with your argument about the sign over the old store? We hear them say, does not this look like an invitation to patronize? Our answer is yes; but wait a little; understand us correctly! We did not say that Stewart was tired of custom—not we. Whoever in his sane moments believed that a rich man who had acquired his money by his own exertions, ever lost a relish for making money, or ever slackened in desire or effort? Why no one. We only meant to be understood by the sign that Stewart's policy then was to approach people in high life by another route, by as little external show and newspaper puffery as possible; but that to keep pace, as it were, with the elegance which enters into life more and more every year, and as an evidence of which we refer to his elegant French house in Bleeker street, and his splendid carriage and other equipage, his residence abroad, &c., he has deemed it a better policy to come the magnificent by erecting a store, palace like, which no other merchant has or can imitate; and in this he is not so far out of the way as one might imagine, for we simple-minded republicans, with all our boasted antipathy to aristocracy, do love the trappings of royalty and splendor, and are as ready to bow before that shrine as any of the veriest slaves of a despot. Knowing this, Stewart has concluded to give the ladies a dazzling reception. On Monday last he opened his new store, and thousands of ladies and curious gentlemen thronged it. Of the exterior we gave a brief description a short time since. The grand entrance leading to the rotunda is used as one compartment for a particular style of goods, hosiery, &c. On either side are rooms, both of which communicate with the grand entrance, wherein are other styles of rich goods. In the rotunda, in the centre, is a circular narrow counter, on which are placed plates of fashions; on either side of this are oval tables, in the centre of which are one or more clerks. On this table are placed rich fancy dressing cases and other fancy articles. Further back, on shelves, are rich goods of various descriptions. At the extreme end of the rotunda, facing the grand entrance, two splendid staircases rise against the wall, running either way to the gallery; in this gallery, in glass cases, are magnificent wedding and other dresses, of the richest possible description, with the prices marked on a slip of paper, also splendid brocade silk scarfs, of prices varying from $50 to $200; then cashmere and other shawls of most extravagant prices; half way around the gallery is an entrance to another compartment, in which plaids and other dresses are kept; clerks without number are in attendance. We understand that on Monday the sales amounted to $20,000. Now the young gentlemen in New York know and appreciate the extravagance which stores like these induce, and their inability to support it, and hence the backwardness manifested in taking wives. Unless ladies can be found who are in principle opposed to encouraging establishments of this description, who are content with what is reasonable in the way of dress, and consult their husband's means in expenditure, they may depend upon it their chances are very small for changing their names: The good which Stewart has done is of a character purely ornamental, if that can be called good. The erection of his commercial palace beautifies to that extent the city, and that is all. The evils resulting are, first, prevention of marriages, by encouraging a spirit of rivalry in dress, and consequent unbounded extravagance, which nine-tenths of our inhabitants, whether married or single, are illy able to bear, and which the single are deterred from incurring; and, secondly, domestic feuds are promoted, by fostering the pride of the wife and children, to the great damage of the purse-strings of the husband and father. Thirdly, creditors are made to suffer, by eventually paying the bills; and last, not least, trade is depressed with young, enterprising, and deserving merchants, who have not the means to compete in splendor of externals. Think of these things, ladies.

We war not with Stewart personally, but with the evils of his system. We delight in seeing ladies handsomely, nay elegantly dressed; but this can be done consistently with the non encouragement of this evil system.

From the Raleigh Standard.

We learn by the late Foreign News, that the Emperor of Russia, who is a shrewd, clear-headed man, has reduced his Tariff, and, to mark his appreciation of the Free Trade movement in England, he has caused the great speech made by Sir Robert Peel in the House of Commons in favor of commercial liberty, to be translated into the Russian language, for the use of his subjects. When the British Parliament, a few months since, paid Mr. Walker, the distinguished head of our Treasury Department, the compliment of printing his Free Trade Report for the use of the two Houses, the Federalists forthwith raised a great noise, and made out Mr. Walker nothing more nor less than a "Britisher." And according to the same rule, we suppose, Sir Robert Peel has been all at once, without his knowledge or consent, metamorphosed into a Russian. It takes Federalists to "do some things as well as others."

A Rare Customer in These Capes.

A panther was killed a few days ago, at the head of Cyprus Creek, in Bladen County, by two small boys, the sons of a Mr. Smith, while out squirrel hunting. The animal was treed by the dogs, and when they approached near enough to observe its formidable dimensions, they were started with surprise; but nothing daunted, they resolved to take the game; and instantly determined to open fire upon him by platoons. One of them accordingly blazed away, without any visible effect; when the other let drive with such force as to bring the critter to the ground with a terrific crash; the dogs immediately sprang upon it, when with a single sweep of its huge paw it cut one of them nearly in twain; in a few moments however, it died of the shot wounds. It measured 8 feet 9 inches in length, from tip to tip—almost equal to the greatest length (of) given by naturalists, of the largest of these animals. We had thought the last of the race in North Carolina had long since passed away.—Ral. Star.

Bilious Cholera.—The following recipe has never been known to fail in a single instance: Take, say a fourth of a pound plug of common chewing tobacco, tear it well to pieces and put it in a vessel and pour on it a sufficient quantity of boiling water to moisten and swell the leaves, lay it on a cloth and apply it to the seat of the pain.

A Wise Father.—One of our exchanges tells a story of an editor out West, who wished to marry a blue eyed damsel in his neighborhood, and like an honest man, asked the consent of her father. Of course the old man, as every prudent papa should do, inquired how much money he could bring the bride. The editor said he hadn't got any money, but he would give her a puff in his paper. The father was satisfied.
