Carboro' Southerner.

Friday, : : : March 5, 1875

[Written for the Southerner.]
To My Departed Child.

'Tis hard to wound a mother's heart,
By rending ties which therein dwell,
But harder still that she should part,
From him on earth she loved so well.

He was so young, so bright, so fair,
And did to her such hopes impart;
To part with him and see him die,
I thought the pang would break her heart.

Let's go where all is in peace,
Where pain no more can reach his breast;
Where all like's life throbbings cease,
And care is lulled to rest.

Original Story.

[Written for the Southerner.]
LELIA'S EXPERIMENT.
BY MARGARET MARCH.

PART II.

"Mother do you really think she will come to-day?"

"I not only think so, but know it, for there is the carriage now, with your father and a lady."

The first speaker was a young girl about fourteen, tall, straight and fair. The second was a lady apparently about thirty five, like-wise tall, straight, but dark. The reader will readily guess that they were Mrs. Hunter and her daughter, and the subject of their conversation no other than Lelia Windrom.

"This is my wife Miss Windrom," said Mr. Hunter as they alighted.

"Come in my dear," said Mrs. Hunter leading the way to the pleasant sitting room, "I know you must be cold, such a raw windy day as it is. Thaw yourself then perhaps you would like to go to your room."

"Thank you mam, I will go at once."

We will leave Lelia in her room and try to give the reader some idea of the place she was now to call "home." It was in one of the eastern counties of the Old North State. A large old fashion house, situated in a grove of giant oaks, and on this old January day, as the carriage drove up the long drive, Lelia thought that she never saw a more dismal, gloomy looking place. But as she stepped in, she forgot all these thoughts and felt only the warm, genial atmosphere of home. Mrs. Hunter, with true Southern hospitality, made her feel that she was only an elder daughter returning home.

"Mother said this was to be your room because it was towards your home, see, this window faces north, and you can see some distance up the road."

"Your mother is very kind, I expect I shall stand at this window and dream of my friends so far away." She sighed as she thought of him of whom she dare not dream. The door closed softly as she gazed in the glowing fire and the dream began. She sat down in the low rocking chair and closed her eyes. She was not sorry for the step she had taken, but she could not feel sad as she thought of all the dear friends she left behind. She knew not how long she had been sitting thus, when she heard a low tap at the door when a curly head popped in, and a child's voice said, "mammy says come to supper," and the curls were gone.

Lelia rose slowly and with a hasty glance in the glass and a gentle shake of her dress, descended to the sitting room, where the family were assembled. It consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter and three children, a boy about sixteen and two girls. The first, Louise we have mentioned, and a little one, Lily, three years old.

"This is my son Wilmer," Miss Windrom. "How do you feel after your long journey?" asked Mr. Hunter.

"Thank you, not at all tired, I like traveling so much, don't think I ever would tire."

"How do you like our country?" asked Mrs. Hunter.

"Very much what I've seen of it. One thing I admired very much that is the tall, stately pine. It was sweet music to hear the winds low murmur as it slowly blew through the long slender needles. Another thing struck me, the country is so exceedingly level. I've heard so much of the grand scenery of North Carolina, but so far have seen none at all.

"Ah! you have never travelled in the Western part of our State. There you will see scenery as grand as the Old World can boast. Before the war, we spent our summers in different parts of the mountains, so I can speak from personal observation. But if not tired, I suppose you must be hungry after your ride, so I beg your pardon for keeping you so long from the fast cooking coffee."

As we have now introduced Lelia to her new home, we will, like privileged historians, pass over several

STATE NEWS.

The Wilson brass band is to 'come to life'.

The Rocky Mount Thespian Club is a success.

Magnolia has sixty pupils in the schools of that place.

The Presbyterian of Wadesboro are building a new church.

The Hillsboro Recorder is new in the 56th year of its existence.

The Central Hotel at Charlotte, is to be still further enlarged and improved.

The Israelites of Wilmington will erect a temple of worship in that city at an early day.

The Episcopalians of Kinston are talking steps to erect a church at that place.

Marriages are frequent occurrences in Durham. That's right—is the way to build up your town.

The travel over the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad is said to be larger now than at any time since the war.

Mr. George A. Dancy, a very prominent citizen of Greenville, Pitt county, died on Sunday week.

The Littleton fruit farmers are in high spirits over the excellent prospects for an immense yield this year.

The Postoffice heretofore known as Harnett C. H., in Harnett county, has been changed in name to Lillington.

The Charlotte mint is used only as an assay office, Congress refusing to appropriate the necessary funds to run it.

Bishop Atkinson will deliver the oration before the Literary Society of Davidson College at the commencement in June next.

The town of Salisbury has voted $50,000 in aid of the Railroad from Salisbury to Wadesboro. Rowan county votes in June on the same proposition.

The Wilson Plaindealer says: Capt. James H. Avant, who left Nash county about two weeks ago, for his new home in Marietta, Arkansas, died very suddenly of pneumonia, in Little Rock, one day last week, before reaching his destination.

The Salisbury Watchman says: Mr. Samuel Hart, a soldier in the war of 1812, died in this county a few days ago at the advanced age of 83 years. Mr. Hart pleases many relatives and friends to mourn his death.

We learn from the Washington Echo that Rev. W. H. Cunningham, Pastor of Swift Creek Mission, who accidentally got his leg broken a few weeks ago, has been removed to his home in Aurora, where he is fast recovering.

Judge Euro, of the 1st Judicial District, has decided that a person who has not settled his taxes is incompetent to act as juror. Commissioners would do well to enquire into this when drawing jurors.

It is reported that the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Company have decided to dispense with a paymaster.—Consequently Mr. Shuro will be discharged and the Treasurer, Mr. Thompson will act in both capacities, Treasurer and Paymaster.

The Raleigh News gives warning against a swindler who has been operating in that city and Goldsboro, playing agent for Messrs. Dale & Atwood, of New York, publishers of The Milliner and Dress Maker, and collecting subscriptions.

The Washington Echo says: The plea that the man was drunk will have no influence with Judge Euro in mitigation of sentence for offenses against the law. Says he: 'I desire it to be understood that I shall make it a rule to add to rather than take from the severity of the sentence in such cases.'

The residence of Rev. Wm. Hooper, two and a half miles from Oxford, was burned on the night of Thursday last week. No insurance. Loss $2,500 to $3,000. The leader says a negro woman named Peggy Robinson has been arrested on a charge of having been the incendiary.

The Magnolia Record says: Harrell's Store, Sampson county, is growing into quite a village. There are about seventy-five persons now living there, two business establishments, two turpentine distilleries, one steam saw-mill, one establishment for manufacturing spirits casks, and one blacksmith shop. There is a good academy building in which a school is maintained for most of the year. Over the academy is a good hall in which the Masons hold regular meetings. There are also a lodge of the I. O. G. T. and a Grange of P. O. H. which meet regularly at the same place.

The Rockingham Spirit of the South, Republican, thinks that the Civil Rights Bill should be called "an act to destroy the Republican party and promote the killing of negroes." It further declares, "it is unnecessary for us to say we are opposed to this measure, the simple fact that we are a white man is sufficient evidence of that, and, henceforth, we propose to act with that party which shall seem to us best calculated to protect the interests of the white people, and at the same time, whilst dealing justly with them, shall keep the colored people in their proper places. If this be treason make the most of it!"

A Queer Case.

At a meeting of spiritualists, held in a village not a great way from Scranton, and not long since one of the members of "the circle" received a message from a friend in the unseen world to the effect that he would certainly die upon a certain day and hour, mentioning the time with a positiveness that to the circle and the gentleman referred to left no room for doubt. The message also conveyed and admission to the effect that he should in anticipation of the event immediately procure a life insurance policy for $10,000 for the benefit of his family. In obedience to the suggestion the policy was secured, and upon the appointed day, and hour the man died. The wife, upon applying to the company for the amount named in the policy, was informed that the policy was voided by reason of her husband having committed "moral suicide"—that is, died because he thought he must do so in accordance with the supposed message. The wife has now brought suit against the company for the amount of the policy.—Scranton (Pa.) Times.
