Manhood: How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, a new edition of Dr. CLEVERLY'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhea or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance. Price, in a sealed envelope, only six cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Sent under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post-paid, or receipt of six cents or two postage stamps.

[From the Danbury News.]
TALKED HIMSELF TO DEATH.

The Pull-Back Dresses Were too Much for Him.

He got off the morning train the 23rd day and meandered into the city, and stopped in front of a fine-looking residence on Munson street. He opened the gate, walked up to the door and pulled the bell. In a moment it was opened and he stepped quickly inside. "You see," he said to the astonished girl, "I much prefer to do the talking inside. It is so unpleasant to have the door closed in one's face when only half through."

He walked into the parlor, and the frightened girl went to inform her mistress that a sewing machine man or a book-peddler had gained access to the house. The lady entered the room and was greeted by the young man of cheek as follows: "They call me a blessing—the ladies do, and I am, madame. I am a labor-saving benefactor to the whole sex. I have a little invention which I am introducing—a perfect little gem. It is, madame, a small, silver-plated, gilt-point concern, which will allow you to wear the new style of pull-back dresses as easily as the breeches."

"What do you mean, sir?" demanded the lady.

"No longer, madame, will you have to take your meals off from the mantle-piece. You can sit down as easily as in the old style of barrel-shaped dresses. When you travel you won't have to lean up against the water-cooler, nor sit on the sharp-edged seat arm. The little invention which will thus facilitate your movements retails for only one dollar. It is called the semi-cylinder, double duplex non-conductor, magical pull-back dress fastener, and he opened his satchel and took out a half metal and wooden concern and said: "Only one dollar! You place it under your skirts this way (illustrating with his coat tail), and when you desire to sit down, pull the right-hand string, which you can have come out in your pocket, and la! down-you gently float until you reach the chair. If you desire to get into a carriage, drop the invention by pulling this string, put your foot on the spring, and you'll find yourself in the carriage in an instant."

The lady called her husband to see the new invention, and the agent explained its workings to him. As the husband's eye fell upon the agent, a wicked thought flashed through his brain, and he determined to be revenged.

"This is a new invention," began the agent, "to enable ladies to draw back their skirts much tighter than at present and, at the same time, allow them to sit down. It is called the high-fangled, draw-back and squeeze-together, new modus operandi. Ladies say I am a labor-saving benefactor—that I am an everlasting—"

"Wait!" shouted the husband; "please explain its workings again." The agent did so.

"Why, that would make a good hay hoister."

"Yes," answered the agent, "but it is more particularly designed for ladies."

The husband sent for his daughter to examine the invention.

"This is a new, unparalleled, upright longitudinal, square-shaped perpendicular, two degrees south by four west, extra strong, slung-together and squish up pull-back dress invention which I am selling for one dollar. Ladies call me a—"

"To do so!" shouted the husband and father, "until I call my other daughter, and he waltzed out of the room and returned with the hired girl and the chamber-maid.

"You see, ladies," began the agent, "this is a fop-over and stand-you-up magical magical, two strings to the right and one to the center, invention, for pulling back your dress; and he went on for half an hour, during which time the husband slipped over to the next house and induced the neighbors to come over and hear the agent talk. He returned with six women and four children, just at the winding up for the fourth time. Escorting one person into the room at a time, he had the agent to tell each one about the 'invention.' He stationed a small boy out in the hall with a lead pencil, who was instructed to make a mark on the wall every time the agent repeated his story. The stock he had brought in was exhausted about noon, when he sent a messenger around the ward to send in the neighbors, and the agent was kept telling the story without intermission till near midnight.

As the sun disappeared behind the western horizon, the agent began to show signs of fatigue, but the husband was as fresh as ever. Eleven minutes to twelve o'clock the agent, who had just completed his yarn for the two hundred and sixteenth time, looked up and gasped. A glass of water was thrown in his face, and the husband told the boy to run in half a dozen more persons, for he thought he could finish the agent now in about an hour and a half. The boy left to rouse up the neighborhood, to find half a dozen who had not yet heard the story of the 'invention.' When he was absent frequent stimulants had to be given the agent to prevent him from fainting. Shortly the boy returned, saying that no more neighbors could be found, as they had all gone on an excursion. The husband on hearing this was in despair, but he had the agent to repeat the story a couple of times to the boy and once to himself. When he had finished he was so far exhausted as to be unable to sit up.

A fendish smile stole across the features of the husband as he said: "Young man, I have hoped for this moment. I have been haunted almost to death by agents. The last agent that came along swindled me out of two dollars, and then I took a terrible oath that I would be revenged upon the next man that attempted to seduce me. Know, then, that I have indeed tested the people who have listened to your eloquence, to come in, that I might turn your own weapon against you. You have talked yourself to death. Thank Heaven! I have succeeded in my revenge. You can live but a few moments longer, but before you die I pray you to repeat again that well-known story."

The agent backed himself up against the side of the room, a glass of water was given him, and he began:

"You see, I have a double duplex—"

The coroner was summoned, an inquest held, the jury returning a verdict that the deceased came to his death by too much circumlocution of the law, and they contributed their fees to the husband, and caused a diploma to be awarded him as a testimonial of the good he had done the public.

Any one now passing Munson street can see a sign hung on the front door of a fine-looking mansion, which reads:

AGENTS, BEWARE.

New York Sight.

Hundreds of our country cousins coming to New York, and thousands of our neighbors in the city, do not know what there is to see, and where to find it. Ask the first man or woman you meet in company, if they have visited one, two or three of the places named below, and they will tell you, at least half of them will, that they have never been, because they can go at any time, and always put it off. But there are more objects of interest and instruction to be seen in this city, than any other on the continent, and the season for visiting New York is now with us, and will last until next summer.

We are about to make a guide-book, nor to mention one-half of the places nor one thousandth part of the objects to be seen, but we will merely indicate a few that every citizen and visitor would do well to see.

MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY.

This will call you to Central Park itself the great attraction in the summer. The Museum is the largest, most elegant and curious collection of specimens in Natural History to be found on this continent, and its extent and variety will fill the visitor with equal astonishment and delight, as he goes from one spacious hall to another and finds those vast areas lined with preservations in various departments of science. Every school should make it a part of its course to visit this place at least monthly and with a competent instructor, and thus in a half a day learn more than by a month's use of books.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY AND EGYPTIAN MUSEUM.

This on the corner of 2d avenue and 11th street, and more is to be learned in a day within those walls than by a voyage to Cairo. Even in the basement the great slabs from Nineveh with the curious carvings thereon, will open a new field of thought and study. And as the mummy men, women, bulls and cats with thousands of other relics of ancient Egypt, are spread before the eye, and the treasures of sculpture, painting and history are viewed, the visitor will find that this commercial city is not wholly given up to trade, but has made great provision for the mental improvement and pleasure of its people.

THE BIBLE HOUSE AND COOPER UNION.

These two buildings are near together, and should be visited for the purpose of seeing what Christian benevolence, and enlightened philanthropy are doing for the benefit of the human race.

THE ASTOR AND THE MERCANTILE LIBRARIES

Are in the same vicinity, all four within a stone's throw, and will richly reward their guests.
