See him at the commencement of the war, as he turned his back upon tendered honors and power to cast his lot with his native State. See him in the hey-day of his fame as successful and victorious commander of the Confederateforces, the idel of his troops, and loved of all men. | See Lim at Appomattox, a conquered general making his farewell address to his troops, as they crowd around him with tears of sorrow and love stream-ing from their eyes. See him again-turning his back upon the wealth and honors of the world, to drink to the bitter drags, the same cup which was placed to his people's liper Seeing all this, can we not exclaim with the
