Carboro Southerner. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1885.

When you're blue come gettin' round. A dark 'n' blue sky. Chilly put on a blue-lined lam. He'll roll 'em away, blue-ye.

When Satan poked up in the way. An' late his wicked eye. Heer, look him rize in the face. He'll take his hole, blue-ye.

If false friends try to lead you astray. You'll find 'em all the same. You'll find 'em all the same. You'll find 'em all the same.

So, I've wanted to "shun de line." An' here's the reason why. When de Lord of Hosts lift up his han' 't's gwine to be a sign.

THE WHISKY HABIT. How an Old Toper Overcame His Love for Liqueur.

A novel idea in the use of intoxicating stimulants came to the notice of a Call reporter yesterday in the case of an old friend, who some time ago was the living personification of the old, old story of brilliant mind clouded from the effects of intoxicants. He rapidly went down hill, and all efforts to rouse him to a sense of his degradation were futile.

The reporter just saw him in this condition over a year ago. One day last week he met a spruce and well-dressed man who bore a remarkable resemblance to his friend, but whom he did not recognize until the individual threw out his hand and called the reporter by name.

"I suppose you hardly know me," he said, a smile wrinkling his health-bloomed face. The reporter admitted that he at first had hardly been able to do so, and then becoming confidential, as old friends do, he inquired of the cause of his change.

"Yes," said the old friend, "I used to be a very hard drinker, as you know. I tried several times to quit, but could not. The appetite for strong drink would come back, and I made up my mind to make one supreme effort to rescue myself from this way."

"I had noticed that men who made their living by buying and selling wines and liquors, and who were in the habit of rolling it around their tongues, as one might say, latching their palate in it—myself included—were never drunk."

SAVINGS BANKS. Their Origin in Europe and in the United States.

Savings banks were unknown, even in Europe, a century ago. While there is some doubt as to who were the originators of the system, it is very probable that the first germ of the savings banks can be traced to the people of Switzerland.

As early as the year 1776 the first effort was made in England by Jeremy Bentham to establish a bank, but his plans failed. Bentham's efforts were seconded, however, by Matthew Flinders, Whitebread, and others in 1807, and they were more successful. The total amount held by the banks of Great Britain is about five hundred millions of dollars.

In the United States the first organization of the kind was made in 1816. The first bank commenced business in the following year, and the pioneer in this country is the Provident Institution for Savings of Boston.
