TO HELP THE REPUBLICANS.

Let them (Democrats and republican parties) go together, by all means. The sooner they do so, the sooner will a victory for the reform movement be obtained. -National Economist

The above admits of no doubt about what the leaders of the Alliannce would do with that organization. The above even throws aside the thin veil which has heretofore been used.

The unwisdom of such advice may well be questioned by all friends of the farming and other laboring classes. In the first place the farmmillions of dollars. ers of this country are not numerically strong enough to control elections unaided.

In the second place the Economist would make its organization a class party, a but slight improvement upon a sectional party; neither of many fold. which can or will so legislate as to give equal justice to all and special privileges to none.
