What Causes Pimples?

Clogging of the pores or mouths of the sebaceous glands with sebaceous or oily matter. The plug of sebaceous matter in the pore is called a blackhead, gray, or comedo. Nature will not allow the clogging of the pores to continue long, hence, inflammation, pain, swelling and redness, later pus or matter forms, breaks or is opened, the plug comes out and the pore is once more free.

There are thousands of these pores in the face alone, any one of which is liable to become clogged by neglect or disease.

What Cures Pimples?

The only reliable preventive and cure, when not due to a constitutional humor, is

Cuticura Soap.

It contains a mild proportion of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, which enables it to dissolve the sebaceous or oily matter as it forms at the mouths of the pores. It stimulates the sluggish glands and tubes to healthy activity, reduces inflammation, soothes and heals irritated and roughened surfaces and restores the skin to its original purity. This is the secret of its wonderful success. For bad complexion, red, rough hands and chapped lips, dry, thin and falling hair, scaly and irritated scalp and simple skin blemishes it is wonderful. It is preserving, purifying and remedying to a degree hitherto unknown among beautifiers for the skin and complexion.

It is greater than the combined sales of all other skin and complexion soaps. Sold throughout the world. For sale by H. A. GILLIAM, DOBBELL GILLIAM, WILLIAM & SON, Chemists, Tarboro, N. C.

Women full of pains, aches and weaknesses find comfort, strength and renewed vitality in Cuticura Plaster, the first and only pain-killing, nerve-strengthening plaster when all else fails.

THE YUKON COUNTRY.

Life in the Rich Mining Camp of Forty Mile, Alaska.

Pioneers in the Gold Diggings of the Far North. The High Gambling and Correspondingly High Prices. Short Operating Season.

This camp of Forty Mile was discovered last summer and is the richest yet struck in Alaska, yet about $800 a day to the men, says the Montanan. The nature of the Yukon country is such that it is a remarkably hard place to get to. The honorable class of old-time miners have possession and tough characters, when found, are at once ordered to leave, several having come out recently.

I will give you prices of a few articles in Forty Mile. Flour, $14.00; bacon, 33 cents; pork, 25 cents; beans, 22 cents; and canned fruit, 60 cents. A Mackinac shirt costs $3, and a pair of gum boots one ounce of gold dust. Now comes the root of all evil—whisky. This sells for 50 cents a drink and $8 per bottle. You can buy everything that a miner needs for less than you can take it in for, as the natives will charge 15 cents a pound to carry it over the mountains, a distance of thirty miles, and no one should take anything with him except clothes.

The town of Forty Mile is at the mouth of Forty Mile creek on the Yukon. It has two general merchandise stores. One belongs to the Northwest Trading Company and the other to our old-time Montanan, Capt. John Healy. There are two saloons and one cigar factory here and 150 miners' cabins, with about 850 mines. These make up the town of Forty Mile.

All the northern part of Alaska is more or less a level country, and it is difficult to get sufficient grade for slide boxes, and in many places they are compelled to use rockers or wheel the dirt to water. Timber is very scarce, and in many places they are compelled to haul forty or fifty miles with dog-trains. A dog will draw about 300 pounds on the snow. Game is scarce, except rabbits and grouse. You may kill a caribou or moose, and again you may not see one for weeks or not at all. Two steamers play up and down the Yukon, one belonging to John Healy and the other to the trading company at Forty Mile. The ground never thaws with dog-trains, not over five or six feet at most, and they have never been able to dig through it. They work down as far as the front is out the first year and then wait for the "never-setting sun" of the next summer to thaw it deeper. The miner can run his sluice-boxes but three and a half or four months of the year. The rest of the time he can whipsaw timber for boxes and such needs, dig-trains, or he can dig. Some spend the winter trapping furs, but they must be on land by June 15 or their claims will be jumpable, according to the Yukon code of laws.

There is one thing I almost forgot to mention. It is the moss, which covers all the ground, except what the water runs over, such as the shallow bars along the creek. This moss is from six to eighteen inches thick and must be removed in order that the ground may thaw out. The boys generally make a winter's job of stripping off this moss.

Like Her Elders.

Edith, who is eight years old, was invited to a children's party. Her blonde hair is perfectly straight, but she started off evidently well pleased with her previous appearance. On her return her mother asked: "Did you have a nice time, Edith?"

There was a moment's hesitation, and then the little girl responded: "Yes, I had a good time, but I should have had a better one if it hadn't been for my hair."

"Why, Edith, what was wrong with your hair?"

"Well, it don't curl, and all the other girls' hair is kinky. I shan't go to another party without my hair can be fixed in kinks."

The next week, when another invitation came for the little girl, her hair was curled and fluffed out in the most approved style. Then her mother led her up to the mirror and said: "There, Edith, what do you think of it?"

Edith regarded herself soberly for a moment and then, turning slowly around, she said: "It's vain, but I like it."—Youth's Companion.

An Old Legend.

There is a legend as old as the Bible itself—in fact, it has a Biblical basis (although it is doubtful if the translations concerning that remarkable occurrence are true to the ancient text)—that "Lo's wife, (being from Sodom) looked back from behind him and also a statue of rock salt, still crouches at her feet. That this is all myth and legend, modern travelers only mentioning it in order to get an excuse for quoting from old-time authors.

QUERER THINGS.

A Few Incidents Which Deserve to Be Remembered.

Querer things happen in this locality. Here are some of them which I have heard lately, says a writer in the Buffalo Express.

A North Collins farmer tells a story around the Washington street market to the effect that one of his hens laid an egg the other day which contained a live snake. He thinks the bird must have been suffering with diphtheria tremens at the time. A truck gardener in Holland has cultivated a new variety of onion and has named it the "James G. Blaine Onion." It can no longer be said that the great man from Maine is without a monument to his memory.

A man from Wyoming county has a cow with a tail which is shaped exactly like a large snake. The cow was once bitten by a rattler. Before that time her tail was like any other cow's tail. But the wound is supposed to have had such an effect on her mind that it changed the shape of her caudal appendage.

A Lockport man has a long beard which he wears in strange fashion. He braids it carefully and coils it around his neck like a scarf.

A merchant in Rochester discharged his clerk the other day because the clerk would insist on wearing a boutonniere on the back of his coat between his shoulder-blades. The young man offered no excuse for his eccentricity, but it is supposed he wanted to impress on his employer the fact that a free American citizen had the right to wear flowers wherever he wanted.

The Baron Munchausen.

Southey wrote to Sir Walter Scott: Of Baron Munchausen I can tell you something. Some years ago in London I was a little startled at hearing a foreigner ushered under this title into a musical party. As this naturally led to inquiries on my part, I was referred to the gentleman himself, who very good-humoredly told me he was the nephew of the celebrated Baron Munchausen, who was a minister under Frederick of Prussia.

It seems the old baron was a humorist who, after dinner, especially if he happened to have any guests who were likely to be taken in by his marvellous tales, used to amuse himself by inventing or retelling such marvellous adventures as are contained in the volumes which bear his name. He added, his uncle was in other respects a sensible, serious man, and that his adventures were only told by the way of quizzing or amusing society.

Baron Munchausen, a German, whose name I have forgotten, who knew the baron and thought he had been neglected by him, compiled the book in revenge, partly from the stories of the baron, partly from other sources and partly from his mother's wit. It proved a good bit for the bookseller, as the baron's name and humor were well known, and by degrees made its way into other countries as a book of entertainment.—Familiar Letters of Walter Scott.

Wish at Her Word.

To be taken too literally at one's word is a very serious matter, and to have proper attention paid to one's expressed wishes. This has been the experience of a young Washingtonian who aspires to a place in the literary world. Having in contemplation a new story, she decided to go to the country for several weeks during the throes of literary composition. To this end she wrote and engaged a room in a quiet farmhouse, telling of her purpose in securing accommodations. At the same time she stated that she wished to be left so absolutely alone that not only was she to have the privacy of her room undisturbed but she preferred not to have her thoughts interrupted by conversation while at table. The answer proving satisfactory, she went down in the country for at least a fortnight's stay after the manner of a beloved literary friend, the lady carried out their part of the bargain that meals were carried on in the most profound silence. After the first greeting upon the arrival of the literary young woman she might have been housed with deaf mutes for any outward-residence to the contrary. Overtures on her part toward conversation were wholly ignored, and after three days of the most appalling silence she finally gave up, realizing that she had been better at her own game, gathered up her belongings and returned with all speed to Washington.—Late Field's Washington.

Their Favorite Authors.

Every great man has had a favorite author. Demosthenes studied Thucydides; Brutus copied Polybius that he might always have a constant reader of his; Voltaire was a constant reader of Racine; and of "Missive's" women; DeWitt read the Bible; Homer and Richardson; Fenelon was lost without a Homer; Montaigne studied Tacitus; Bourdaloue read every year the epistles of Paul; and the works of Cicero; Grotte carried a copy of Lucan in his pocket; Leibnitz always had a Virgil in his pocket; La Fontaine read Sallust; Quvedo, adored Don Quixote; Rousseau read Plutarch; Chastanet read Herodotus; Charles V. and Napoleon Bonaparte both thought Machiavelli the greatest author that ever lived.

CHECKMATED.

Chagrins of a Thieving Customer in a Barber Shop.

The Adroit Perpetrating of Fraudulent Propriety.—The Bold Game of One Being Made—How the Proprietor of the Place Checkmated Him.

There is a gang of thieves in this city who steal hats and coats from barber shops, says the New York Herald. They do not visit the swell shops in the fashionable localities, but confine themselves to the streets in the vicinity of Third avenue, where the barbers are not naturally suspicious of a stranger. Their mode of operation is clever and the theft is never discovered till the miscreant has made good his escape.

One of these thieves usually enters the barber shop when all the chairs are occupied. While ostensibly waiting to be shaved he makes an inventory of the hats and coats on the rack and keeps his eye on the article he desires to purloin. When the barber has finished shaving him he cleverly dons the best coat and hat in the shop and leaves his own tattered clothing instead. I entered a barber shop in Yorkville the other day, and had removed my hat and coat, when a young man who had just been shaved walked over to the hat rack and took from it a hat that had turned green from age. He stood, apparently dumfounded, gazing at the hat in his hand, without uttering a word. Believing the young man had been made a victim of these thieves, I inquired if the hat wasn't his own, and he muzzily replied he didn't think so, and, to my utter surprise, he made a hasty exit, leaving the hat behind, as is usually the case with one who has been victimized, but snatched out of the shop, muttering something that wasn't audible to anyone in the shop.

Meanwhile the proprietor and his assistants, who were at work on their customers, and who had appeared to be oblivious of the young man's presence, gave vent to loud and continued laughter. It was a few minutes before I could ascertain from the proprietor the cause of all this merriment. He said: "That young man is one of those thieves, and the week before he entered my shop to get shaved, and left with a new hat belonging to one of my customers, leaving behind an old hat. When my customer saw what had happened he was angry, but he didn't take the old hat that the young thief left, and swore he would never enter my place again. I determined to save the old hat in hopes that the thief would return some day, and my hopes were gratified to-day by the same young man walking in with the new hat on that he had taken a week ago. He removed the hat, placed it on the rack, and proceeded to the chair to be shaved. This afforded me an opportunity of catching him at his own game. I went into the back room where I had stowed the old hat he had left, and brought it out, and placing it on the rack removed the new hat and placed it in the back room where I had kept the old one. Hence his surprise on seeing his old hat that he had left with us a week ago. I shall now begin my next customer by restoring him his own hat."

I learned from other barbers that hats and coats had been stolen from their shops in a similar manner, and their eyes are wide open to catch the miscreants.

A Famous Musical Name.

Bach is the most famous musical name in the history of art. Musical archives contain the names of 247 Bachs, who in one way or another, but generally as organists, distinguished themselves both by composition and performance. Jean Bach's last, and in some respects greatest work, "The Art of Fugue," was left unfinished by the failure of his eyes. His friends urged him in his old age to write a treatise on fugue and fugue making. He started to do so, but after writing a few pages, threw away the work in disgust, exclaiming: "I cannot teach by precept, only by example," then recommenced the work on a different plan. He took one simple subject, and on it wrote sixteen fugues and four canons in every style of composition. It is considered to be the most splendid legacy of his genius.

A Charming Russian.

One likes to read how the czarina constantly accompanies her husband in his rides and drives. Not only does it indicate wifely devotion; but it proves an intrepidity too often denied as an attribute to woman. It is said that she thinks her presence is a defense from a shot aimed at him might reach her, that a bomb under the carriage would not be discriminated. Yet she hopes that her presence may prevent the bomb-throwing, and she equally hopes that the bullet may reach her, if so be that she saves his life. She is very small, and the contrast between her figure and that of the czar, who is almost gigantic, is very remarkable. Her oldest boy is like her in size, a fact that somewhat troubles the Russian people, accustomed to great also in rulers. But his mother's training has developed in him a strong, resolute character, consistent and studious, and capable of standing by a conviction.

SILVER DOLLAR'S HISTORY.

Various Designs and Inscriptions Used on the Coin Since 1793. The silver dollar is always being discussed in the journals, and some of the facts concerning it are of interest. Here is the chronological history: Authorized to be coined, act of April 2, 1792, weight, 135 grains; fineness, 900.4. Weight changed, act of January 18, 1837, to 412 1/2 grains. Fineness changed, act of January 18, 1837, to 900. Coinage discontinued, act of February, 1878. Coinage resumed, act of February, 1878. American gold coinage from March, 1878, to December 31, 1887, $23,236,357. Total amount coined to December 31, 1889, $354,969,239.

The first silver dollar was put in circulation in 1793. "It was a crude design," says a historian. "On the obverse or face of the coin was imprinted the head of a young lady whose hair was flowing to such an extent that she looked as if over-taken in a fierce gale of wind." In 1796 congress stepped in to the aid of the typical damsel and tied her hair up with a bit of ribbon. The fifteen stars were after this reduced to the original thirteen, in recognition of the number of states. In 1836 the design was again changed, and the silver dollar bore the figure of a woman in a flowing garment. The designer neglected to put on the thirteen stars and the coin was called in. Anyone now in possession of one of those dollars has a valuable souvenir. The new design had the lady surrounded by the stars.

The dollar of 1838 was the first artistic piece of silver coined by the United States. In April, 1864, the first dollar having the words "In God We Trust," was coined. In 1873 the era of what was called the trade dollar, of 900 fineness, began. That troublesome coin ran its erratic course in five years. In 1878 the liberty dollar made its appearance. Miss Anna W. Williams, a teacher in a school at Philadelphia, sent for her portrait, her profile being then considered the most perfect obtainable. Her classic features still decorate the silver dollar.—Chicago Post.

THOUGHTLESS CRUELTY.

The Wearing of the Little Chameleon White Alive.

There is a loud protest in Boston against the advertisement of dealers offering for sale live chameleons, with other animals, to be worn on the coat or cloak as an ornament. The S. P. C. A. has been appealed to, and will take action in the matter, if possible. One citizen says through the Transcript: "Will you kindly allow me a little space in your columns to enter my protest against the wholesale transportation of chameleons from the south to serve as advertisements for certain stores in our city. The delicate little creatures, of so much use in their own climate, are brought here to be confined by a chain and pin to some thoughtless purchaser's coat or dress, and live but a few days or weeks at the most. It is impossible to give them the insects which form their sole food (Encyclopedia Britannica) and this, combined with the cold climate, makes their life here one of suffering, finally ending in starvation. To add to this, the chain placed about their throats or bodies prevents the exercise of the functions peculiar to the species—the power of very largely inflating their lungs and throats with air.

"To one who has seen them running about on the plants and shrubs of the gardens of the south and doing their little best to preserve the balance of nature in destroying up welcome insects, it is most pitiful to see the beautiful little creatures chained like prisoners and helplessly starving to death. To those who have looked upon them merely as curiosities, a moment's thought will suffice to turn their curiosity to pity and make them long, with the writer, to be able to stop this thoughtless, useless and cruel traffic."

A Possibility.

Little Dinah—Oh, Miss Minnie! You ain't gwine to hang up a stockin' wid a hole in it, is you?

Minnie—Yes, I am. And I'm a-doin' it 's purpose, too. I want Saint Claus to see that I don't want any little bits o' things. Anything that'll stay in my stocking 'll have to have some size to it.

Little Dinah—Well, if you gwine to do dat, Miss Minnie, won't you please, ma'am, lemme hang one o' mine under yours, so's I can catch de drippin' of—Harper's Young People.

THE NEW YORK WEEKLY HERALD
For 1894—WILL BE WITHOUT QUESTION AMERICA'S

Leading Family Paper.

The reputation that the Weekly Herald has enjoyed for many years of being the best home newspaper in the land will be materially added to during the year of 1894. No paper or expense will be spared to make it in every department the most reliable, interesting and instructive of all weekly newspaper publications.

It will be improved in many ways. A number of new features and departments will be added. The latest developments in all fields of contemporary human interest will be ably discussed from week to week by accomplished writers.

THE NEWS OF THE WORLD will be given in a concise but complete form. Every important or interesting event, either at home or abroad, will be duly described in the columns of the Weekly Herald.

In politics the Herald is absolutely independent and sound. It tells the rights and wrongs of all sides without fear.

Farmers and stock raisers cannot afford to be without the Weekly Herald during the coming year. It will contain a regular department each week devoted exclusively to subjects of timely interest to them and giving many valuable suggestions and new ideas.

The women and children of the land will find in the Weekly Herald a welcome visitor. The household and children's pages will be both instructive and entertaining. They will abound in hints and receipts which women so much value.

A brilliant array of novels and short stories by the best writers in America and England has been secured, so that fiction will be one of the most attractive features in the Weekly Herald during 1894. In fact, the Weekly Herald will be a magazine of the highest order, combined with a complete newspaper.

There are single retail shoe stores in our large cities which sell 1,000 pairs of shoes a day, making a net profit of $20,000 a year. We sell shoes low, but we sell a great many pairs, the clear profit on our ladies', men's and children's shoes is at least ten cents a pair, and an average of ten boys' shoes, ten cents a pair. We shall—through shoe stores in every city—sell only 500 pairs of shoes a day if they would carry our new invention. We should be able to pay a yearly dividend of $5.25 share, or over 50 per cent. a share. The price must inevitably be much more than $10 a share. We have over 1,000 stockholders, and the number is increasing daily. Some of the principal stockholders are: F. W. Walling, N. Y.; J. P. Rogers, N. A. Bond, Jr., Chicago; J. B. Campbell, Chicago; W.
