THE NEW YORK WEEKLY HERALD
For 1894.
WILL BE WITHOUT QUESTION AMERICA'S

Leading Family Paper.

The reputation that the Weekly Herald has enjoyed for many years of being the best home newspaper in the land will be materially added to during the year of 1894. No paper or expense will be spared to make it in every department the most reliable, interesting and instructive of all weekly newspaper publications.

It will be improved in many ways. A number of new features and departments will be added. The latest developments in all fields of contemporaneous business interest will be ably discussed from week to week by accomplished writers.

THE NEWS OF THE WORLD will be given in a concise but complete form. Every important or interesting event, either at home or abroad, will be fully described in the columns of the Weekly Herald.

In politics the Herald is absolutely independent and sound. It tells the rights and wrongs of all sides without fear.

Farmers and stock raisers cannot afford to be without the Weekly Herald during the coming year. It will contain a regular department each week devoted exclusively to subjects of timely interest to them and giving many valuable suggestions and new ideas.

The women and children of the land will find in the Weekly Herald a welcome visitor. The household and children's pages will be both instructive and entertaining. They will abound in hints and receipts which women so much value.

A brilliant array of novels and short stories by the best writers in America and England has been secured, so that fiction will be one of the most attractive features in the Weekly Herald during 1894.

In fact, the Weekly Herald will be a magazine of the highest order, combined with a complete newspaper.

FOR FALLING HAIR, -USE CULLEY'S- Bald Head Preparation

I desire to say to the public and the ladies especially that I now have my Hair Preparation so that I can arrest the falling out of the hair within 12 to 15 days, and this you will readily see if you will give it a trial. Hair also thickens from its use. It has no unpleasant odor and leaves no danger of contracting eczema, dandruff, etc. Must be used daily, and applied by its use. Young men will please make a note of this. Nothing asked to show the truthfulness of the above except a fair trial of CULLEY'S BALD HEAD PREPARATION. Good references given to prove that the hair is thick if not thicker than ever.

There are single retail shoe stores in our large cities which sell 200 pairs of shoes a day, making a net profit of $250,000 a year. We sell shoes low, but we sell a great many pairs, the clear profit on our ladies' shoes at least $100,000 a year. We sell our men's shoes at one pair, and on our boys' shoes we sell 500 pairs of shoes a day. We sell our shoes at the rate of the fifty largest cities of the U. S., and if we sell only 200 pairs of shoes a day they would earn $250,000 a year. We should be able to pay a dividend of 10% on our investment. We sell the stock at $10 a share. The price must be more than $10 a share. No stock has ever been sold at less than this price, which is the par value. Stock companies are incorporated, Capital $1,000,000. LARGE SORES ON FACE

Most Use of Hands from Blood Poisoning. Physicians and Remedies No Benefit. Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

I have used your CUTICURA REMEDIES, and can truthfully say that they are everything and more than you represent them. Last night I was greatly troubled with blood poisoning caused by Diphtheria. Large sores made their appearance on my face, and my hands were in such a condition that I could not use them. After trying numerous physicians and remedies and receiving no benefit therefrom, I was advised to try the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and did so, and I am now free from all my skin trouble. I cannot speak praise enough for your remedies. S. M. FLETCHER, 2222 Fairmount Avenue, Baltimore, Md.

BABY SEVERELY AFFLICTED
My baby was severely afflicted with some dreadful skin disease. His head, face and hands were nearly one solid sore. I had tried numerous remedies, but all seemed to do no good. I saw an advertisement for CUTICURA, and bought a complete set, and began using it, and now my little girl seems to be completely cured. S. M. FLETCHER, 2222 Fairmount Avenue, Baltimore, Md.

CUTICURA WORKS WONDERS
Since a single ointment of CUTICURA SOAP, together with the CUTICURA PILLS, has cured so many cases, there is now no reason why diseased and humiliated skin should be so long in being cured by the CUTICURA Remedies as a trifling cost.

Nathan Williams,
as my life work. I never thought of making money by writing a paper, and it was not until I came to Baltimore that I realized that I could write anything which had a real money value. I left Georgia on account of the death of my dear mother, and I loved her dearly, and I could not endure life amid the old associations without her. I gave up my school and moved to this city and began teaching here. About forty of my boys came from the south to Baltimore to enter my school, and had not changed my religion I would probably be teaching to-day. Some time since I came here, however, I grew convinced that my religious ideas were wrong, and from being an Episcopalian I was converted to Catholicism and became a member of the Catholic Church. The most of my students were Episcopalian, and when their parents learned of the change in my religious belief they withdrew their sons from the school, and the result was that I realized that I was not writing for Harper's, and that I could give him stories like those he would pay for. I then wrote some stories for Harper's. They were published and paid for, and I have been writing for him ever since. My first story was published after I was fifty years of age.

As Richard Malcolm Johnston said this looked into his bright blue eyes and could not realize that he was more than seventy years of age. It is true that his hair and mustache are frosted silver, but his cheeks are rosy with health and his voice is the silvery ring of youth. He is tall, straight, life-looking man, and he is full of enthusiasm and life. He is modest in the extreme concerning himself and his work, and he told me that it was a continual surprise to him that his stories were accepted by the magazines. "I suppose," said he, "it is because they are a large extent of historical fiction, and that I am a native of the South. They are true to life, and they are merely my remembrances of the people of my boyhood. The dialect which I use is the language of the people among whom I grew up, and my characters are real characters, with their names changed."

Has young Bondclipper proposed yet? asked a Harlem mother of one of her numerous unmarried daughters.

"Not yet; but I think he is going to pretty soon. There are some pretty strong indications. He has got orange blossoms on his mind."

"I'd like to know why you think he has orange blossoms on his mind?"

"When we were at the soda-water fountain yesterday evening he took orange phosphates."—Texas Sittings.

A SOUTHERN NOVELIST.

Richard Malcolm Johnston and His Clever Work.

How His Conversion to Roman Catholicism Changed Him from an Editor to a Story Teller—His First Literary Effort.

I spent an afternoon last week with one of the most charming writers of the United States, writes Frank G. Carpenter in the Chicago Herald. I refer to Richard Malcolm Johnston, who ranks with Uncle Remus and Thomas A. Janvier as among the greatest story tellers. The plain, no-palaverise the coal and throw it in a line jet into a receptacle in direct range of flame from a furnace or other blaze. It instantly ignites and burns with a fierce heat. By an ingeniously contrived process oxygen is introduced and the strongly agitated current of air prevents any dust falling, but keeps it suspended, where it is soon consumed. There are no smoke, ashes or other residue, but complete and absolute consumption, as far as appearance goes. Thus there is neither waste of fuel nor any of the heavy and disagreeable work of handling ashes and cleaning up. This latter point alone would give the invention a right of way, for it is a saving of fuel in all its parts, a greatly increased degree of heat and the less cost attending the running of the plant. The intention is for large works and is not yet available for dwellings or small shops. It needs more space and power than can be had in confined quarters. In time this can, no doubt, be arranged for.—N. Y. Ledger.

HIS FIRST ATTEMPT.
Experiences of a Postman During His First Day's Work.

A route is given to you and just about this time it begins to dawn upon you that perhaps you could not cover the route in half the time the regular man did, and before you got half a block away you got mixed up because you couldn't work your papers in with your letters, to say nothing of several small packages in your bag. You found yourself chafing up and down the street and in order to make up the time you were losing you began to plunge and the more you plunged the more you got mixed up and the hotter you got, and once, when you stood still looking for a number, a little boy asked you whom you were looking for. Dreadful, wasn't it?

And when you got back an hour or so behind the regular man's time you were sure it was the heaviest route in the office and you felt like falling when you were told that this was the easiest. And owing to your inability to make time you had to double up with your partner, so that you worked all day long, from before sunrise until long after sunset. You got no lunch except a few mouthfuls you grabbed in passing from a free-lunch counter, and when you got home you were so tired, so hungry and so disgusted with your first day at the business that you would have resigned forthwith, but there was the rib.—Postal Record.

The Referendum a Mistake.
The referendum rightly looked at is really a step of retrogression; it offends the representative system and grievously diminishes the dignity of parliaments. Its root principle is, in a word, the principle of numbers; it is the apotheosis of majorities; an appeal from quality to quantity. Parliamentary representatives either are or should be men of great knowledge and ability; they are the men whom they represent, and the people which elect them will probably be wanting in political sagacity.

Mazzini, whose faith in the people was almost a religion, spoke of "the great and beautiful ensign of democracy, the progress of all through all under the leading of the best and wisest." Very good; but where the referendum is applied what is the result? "The leading of the best and wisest?" Even as it is, such a leading is not always to be had, as anyone who knows anything of American politics can very well testify.

"The best and wisest" are swallowed up and silenced in the crowd. There is, indeed, a good deal of truth in Lord Sherbrooke's humorous illustration of democracy in an omnibus trying to turn the driver of the box and get hold of the reins themselves; with what result we are left to imagine.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Particular in Their Diet.
Ten thousand New York ladies who bought lizards to wear forgot that in winter there are no flies for lizards to eat. If these chameleons could have been trained to eat cotton bugs and roaches they would have been fat and happy lizards, and their mistresses would not now be unhappy women.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Speed of Telephonic Speech.
Where the telephone wires are overlaid the speed of transmission is at the rate of 16,000 miles a second; where the wires are through cables under the sea the speed is not more than 6,000 miles a second.

A NEW SMOKE CONSUMER.

A Contrivance Which Causes Absent Consumption of Fuel. Nuisances to be endured, must have an excuse for being. Lacking this, it only remains to find the easiest way to get rid of them. Smoke consumers have for a long time been urgently demanded, but, up to date, they have been either too unwieldy, expensive or inefficient for practical purposes. A new process, however, promises the most complete success. It has been put to many tests and has proven so satisfactory that a number of steamship companies and some large manufacturing concerns have adopted it. The plan is to pulverize the coal and throw it in a line jet into a receptacle in direct range of flame from a furnace or other blaze. It instantly ignites and burns with a fierce heat. By an ingeniously contrived process oxygen is introduced and the strongly agitated current of air prevents any dust falling, but keeps it suspended, where it is soon consumed. There are no smoke, ashes or other residue, but complete and absolute consumption, as far as appearance goes. BUYING REINDEER.
Uncle Sam's Efforts to Get Them Into Alaska.

The Animals Desired That They May Take the Place of the Dogs Now Used—How the Siberian Natives Drive Them.

Uncle Sam has gone somewhat extensively into the business of buying reindeer, and the first consignment is now in the city, very much the worse for wear, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The animals are the second of the kind ever brought to the city. Some time ago two were obtained for Golden Gate park, but one has since died.

The animals were bought by the government agent, H. Bruce, in Siberia. The purpose of the purchase is to introduce the reindeer in Alaska, where they will be used instead of dogs. It is impossible to use horses, and dogs do not serve the purpose as well as they might.

Some time ago there was a season of the greatest distress among the Esquimaux in Alaska. The report of it led to a congressional investigation and the appropriation of several thousand dollars, part of which was to buy reindeer in Siberia and have them brought to Alaska. An agent was dispatched to Siberia, and his first consignment was stationed in a lot adjacent to the Lick paths.

The greatest difficulty was experienced in getting the animals here. Several died on the way and there are but six remaining.

The animals will be used to great advantage at the north. They are small, but swift and powerful. In Siberia they cost five dollars apiece. The natives have a peculiar way of harnessing and driving the animals. The harness is simply a band over the shoulders and between the legs. The deer is fastened to the center of the sled, but not to the right. It is steered by the horns and covers the ground as rapidly as a good horse.

A BAD HALF HOUR.
He Got Away, But the Beauty of That Chair Was Ruined.

At the home of a popular girl in this city a most uncomfortable half hour was recently spent by a modest youth who had called to see her. The youth is noted for both bashfulness and nervousness.

The night in question he went with a friend to the girl's house. He took a comfortable seat in a large armchair, and as was his habit, soon began to nervously poke his fingers into cracks and holes in the ornamental parts of the chair. He showed one finger into a hole in this manner, but found, to his dismay, that his knuckle positively refused to come back through the hole.

The more the young man worked to release his finger the harder it was, as the finger became swollen. The youth was too bashful to mention the ridiculous predicament into which he had gotten himself, but bore the pain in silence. He suffered untold agony for fear his friend would go before he released his finger.

Finally the hostess noticed his apparent uneasiness. The youth, with many blushes, then told the cause. It was not until half an hour later that the bashful youth and the chair parted company. The youth finally succeeded in releasing his finger, with the aid of a hatchet and chisel, but the handsome chair is a thing of the past.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Maternal Devotion.
In the western part of Massachusetts, says the Churchman, a fire recently destroyed a fine barn on a stock farm, and a number of blooded horses and cows perished in the flames.

Soon after the fire the owner, walking over the ruins, came upon an object which touched him more than the sight of the charred bodies of his horses and Jerseys.

There sat an old black hen. He wondered that she did not move her head to look at him as he came near her, but he thought she must be asleep. He poked her with his cane, and to his surprise the wing which he touched fell into ashes. Then he knew that she had been burned to death.

But out from under her came a faint little peep, and pushing her aside with his cane, the man found ten live yellow chickens. The hen had sacrificed her own life to save them.

Senator Hoar and the Reporter.
On the occasion of the last visit of United States Senator George Frisbie Hoar to New York he was approached by a reporter for the New York Press. He was walking up and down the corridor, when the reporter stepped up to him and said: "Senator Hoar?" "Yes, I'm Senator Hoar," replied the senator.

"Well, senator, I represent the New York Press," said the reporter.

"Do you, hey?" responded the senator, gruffly. "Well, sir, I'm glad to see the New York Press so well represented. Good day, sir." And he resumed his walk.

Saucy.
The Boston Transcript records another instance of a foolish question and a shrewd answer. "Picture" said a young painter to a friend. "What's the matter with that, eh?" "I don't know," answered the friend, "but I should say it was a case of art failure."

MR. CECIL RHODES.
Governor of a Typical English Ruler in South Africa.

Begin as a Miner in the Diamond Fields—His English Wit and Resources—What a Great Influence in the Frontier Life.

Most conspicuous just now among Englishmen of the type of horse players is Mr. Cecil Rhodes, whose title and striking figure has been brought very prominently before the English-speaking world of late by the war in South Africa. Beginning as an individual miner in the diamond fields he showed great tenacity and energy, and rapidly developed that instinct for organization and management which has now become his great talent. He rapidly consolidated the mining interests of his district into one great concern, which is probably the most extensive mining company in the world. He had the valuable quality of inspiring men with confidence, not only in his judgment and ability but in his great schemes, and was speedily recognized as a natural leader. Nine years ago it is said that in the office of a merchant he laid his hand upon a map of Africa, covering the central portion from the Cape of Good Hope to the Zambesi river, saying: "All that for England; that is my dream." And what he did with the mining interests he has now done with the race and international respect. He has convinced the English of the Cape and the Boers of the Transvaal that their interests are identical; and there is now in southern Africa but one party, the new Afriander party, and Mr. Rhodes is not only the head but the creator of it. The war with Lobengula has been almost entirely managed by local rewards should be local also. In other words, the English people at the Cape are going to manage their own affairs, and if England attempts to impose a policy from London upon them there will be a frank intimation that the United States of South Africa may come into existence.

Mr. Rhodes believes in the manifest destiny, not of the English sovereigns, but of the English-speaking race, to control the globe. He has the English love of order and respect for the law and the English hatred of anarchy and of license in all its forms. He believes profoundly in self-government, as his gift of ten thousand pounds sterling to Mr. Parnell sufficiently evidenced, and as his declaration to Mr. Gladstone that the day of taxed republics without representation in the taxing assembly has gone by forever sufficiently shows. He is a great power dealing with rough conditions with a firm hand and apparently with a statesmanlike purpose. It is said of him that he cares nothing for money except as an instrument to his higher ambitions. The Review of Reviews described him not long ago as having the face of a Caesar, the ambition of a Loyalist and the wealth of a Croesus. A man of forty, who has made himself enormously rich, has practically organized a new commonwealth and become its prime minister, who has built a railroad and is building a telegraph across Cape Town to Alexandria, and who has extended the border of Cape Colony to the Zambesi river, is evidently a man from whom much may be expected.—Outlook.

Chicago Hospitality.
The young lady entered a Chicago book store hesitatingly, as if she were uncertain of her location.

"Can I do anything for you, miss?" asked the polite clerk.

"Yes. I want you to send four or five dozen books to our house on Prairie avenue. Here's the address. Send the bill with the books."

"What books do you wish, miss?" inquired the clerk.

"Oh, any will do, so long as there's enough of them. I'm going to have a girl from Boston visit me and I want to make her feel at home."—Detroit Free Press.

Up and Down.
Dr. Edward Fynchon, of this city, is the inventor of a flying machine which he claims to have certain points of advantage over anything that the airy Mr. Pennington ever devised. Heretofore the chief difficulty with a flying machine has been to induce it to fly. Fynchon proposes to use dynamite. That certainly ought to send the machine up all right; it always has been easy enough to bring the machine down.—Chicago Dispatch.

Economy Alone a Sufficient Reason for Breaking It.

The telegraph operators were telling stories again. The tall man, who has held a key all over the country, had the floor.

"You see a good many jokes in the papers," said he, "about the culture of Boston and the habit people living there have of using big words and correct grammar and all that. Most of you think that these jokes have no foundation in fact. Now, I know better. I was a receiving clerk in the Western Union office there a good many years ago, and some of the messages handed in to me were corkers."

"One summer I had the cable window. One day two women dressed in black and greatly agitated came in and inquired the rate per word to London. I told them it was twenty-eight cents. They consulted for a minute and then one of them asked for a blank. I told them where the blanks were and one of them wrote a message. The other took it and read it two or three times."

"Then she came over to the window and again how much it was a word to London. Twenty-eight cents, I told her. She looked at the message dubiously. The other woman came up to her and said: 'Don't you like it?'"

"No," she said, "I don't like it. That form is improper. You say that Charles decided this morning, when it should be said that Charles committed suicide this morning."

"But," said the other, "if we put it in that way we will save twenty-eight cents."

"The woman who objected turned this proposition over in her mind for a long time. Finally she said: 'I don't think that such syntax is excusable.'"

"The other took the blank and read the message a few dozen times. 'We're poor,' she said, 'dear!' after studying it in all its phases, and we can't save twenty-eight cents any easier.'"

"This partially convinced the woman who objected. 'But what will our friends think?' she asked, dubiously.

"I suppose they will notice it, but we can't help that. Then the two women retired to one corner of the room and had a consultation. After talking earnestly for ten minutes they wrote out another message. So help me, this is the way I got it: 'Charles suicided this morning. False syntax used because it is cheaper.'"

Gladstone's First Speech.
Mr. Labouchere has come into possession of a photograph of Mr. Gladstone making his first great speech in the house of commons in 1833. The sketch, which is said to have been drawn at the time, represents Mr. Gladstone, then a member for Newark, speaking from the front bench below the gangway in the old house that was burned down the next year. Mr. Gladstone's very first utterance in the house of commons was made, not from the front bench below the gangway, but from under the gallery, where he was almost invisible to reporters; and, curiously enough, it was in reply to Rigby Wason, the member for Ipswich, and father of Mr. Eugene Wason, who now represents South Ayrshire as one of Mr. Gladstone's staunchest supporters.
