SHEEP FARMING PAYS.

If Properly Managed It Is Sure to Return a Fair Profit.

Sheep farming requires the least labor of any kind of farming, and is one of the most profitable if properly managed. It is the least laborious because sheep are more easily kept than other animals. They will eat food that no other kind of stock will touch, and they require less personal attention, besides being more hardy and less liable to disease.

They are the most profitable because, in addition to the foregoing, they are the sources of two valuable products, while with other stock but one is looked for. Even though wool is low, the fleece will bring enough to pay for the keep of the animal, and the mutton will be the profit.

Formerly sheep owners bred simply for wool, and as the highest development in the wool-bearing capacity is incompatible with the perfection of mutton-producing ability, the latter suffered to such an extent that the flesh of the animal was practically unsalable. Mutton-eating was steadily discouraged, and the genuine lovers of this meat had recourse to Canada, where mutton sheep were reared. That this belief in the inferiority of the American product still exists is shown by the fact that "Canada mutton" signs are still exhibited in the butchers' shops and wagons in New York.

But with the discovery that the production of both flesh and fleece in a high degree is compatible in the same animal, the demand for mutton has grown. At sight of this delicious, juicy meat prejudice has faded and is fading away. It has become a formidable rival to beef, and its consumption may readily be increased a hundred per cent.

And yet many men are talking as if the business were ruined and are getting out of it as fast as they can, ignorant of the fact that it is the best farm property they have to-day. These are the men who forget that conditions have been reversed since they went into the business. Mutton is now the staple and wool the by-product. If the wool pays expenses, that is all that should now be asked of it.—D. Florens, in N. Y. World.

ABOUT ESSEX SWINE.

Some Merits and Defects of One of the Oldest Breeds.

This is one of the oldest English breeds of swine. Its merits have obtained for it a well-deserved popularity in this country, as well as in its native land. The modern Essex breed is the result of a cross of the original stock on the Neapolitan. It belongs to one of the so-called small breeds.

Essex swine are black, or, rather, ash-black in color; they have a short-dished face, broad between the eyes; erect, thin ears, full jowls, short, thick neck, body of medium length, broad, deep and straight, with heavy hams, bones fine, but sufficiently strong to support the body; hair fine and soft, but thin; no bristles; legs short and fine, but straight and set wide apart; hoofs erect.

When matured, the improved Essex will weigh from three to four hundred pounds. They mature early, are prolific and possess great vigor of constitution. They fatten easily, range well and, not being troubled with mange or sun-scald, are a peculiarly valuable breed for the south. The Essex are excellent as a cross, being sure to give quality and early maturity to any breed. When crossed upon common or coarser swine they will improve them almost beyond recognition. The objection urged against them is their tendency to fatten rapidly, which causes the carcasses to lack the desired proportion of lean meat. This objection can be largely overcome by limiting the amount of food and compelling exercise. Being good grazers, they should be allowed unrestricted run of pasturage and no corn or other fattening food until it is desired to finish them off. On the other hand, their tendency to fatten is a great recommendation where roasting pigs are desired. The meat can be made fit for pork at any age, from a month upward. In England these hogs are marketed in great numbers when from five to eight months old, for light family pork, and for that purpose there are none better.—N. Y. World.

Feeding Wheat to Pigs.

Mr. J. C. Hutton, the well-known English bacon curer, gives many valuable hints, and points out that, with pigs running about, the hams did not develop as they would do if penned up. Then, again, it has been a disadvantage for small and large pigs to feed together, naturally the former being very much "elbowed" out of the troughs. In recent wheat-feeding trials, at first raw wheat was merely thrown on the bare ground, involving a certain amount of waste. After a week or two wheat was steeped in cold water and put into wooden troughs. Now he considers it a great economy to crush the wheat.

Feed the Young Stock.

Lambs, colts and calves should be kept continuously growing, whether they are to be kept over winter or sold in the fall. When they go into winter quarters the observer should be able to note their sleek, fine, healthy, robust condition. Such growth can only be obtained by judicious management and attention. Good pasture, pure water, perhaps a little grain during the droughty season and frequent salting are needed.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Aug. 14th, 1893.
—I can speak in the highest terms of your medicine from my own personal knowledge. I was affected with heart disease, pleurisy and rheumatism for 35 years, was treated by the very best physicians and spent hundreds of dollars, tried every known remedy without finding relief. I have only taken one bottle of your P. P. P., and can cheerfully say it has done me more good than anything I have ever taken. I can recommend your medicine to all sufferers of the above diseases.

ABERDEEN, O., July 21, 1891.
MESSRS. LIPPMAN BROS., Savannah, Ga.: DEAR SIRS—I bought a bottle of your P. P. P. at Hot Springs, Ark., and it has done me more good than three months' treatment at the Hot Springs. Send three bottles C. O. D.
Respectfully yours,

Capt. J. D. Johnston.

To all whom it may concern: I hereby testify to the wonderful properties of P. P. P. for eruptions of the skin. I suffered for several years with an unsightly and disagreeable eruption on my face. I tried every known remedy but in vain, until P. P. P. was used, and am now entirely cured.

Skin Cancer Cured.

Testimony from the Mayor of Sequin, Tex.

SEQUIN, TEX., January 14, 1893.
MESSRS. LIPPMAN BROS., Savannah, Ga.: Gentlemen—I have tried your P. P. P. for a disease of the skin, usually known as skin cancer, of thirty years' standing, and found great relief; it purifies the blood and removes all irritation from the seat of the disease and prevents any spreading of the sores. I have taken five or six bottles and feel confident that another course will effect a cure. It has also relieved me from indigestion and stomach troubles. Yours truly,
CAPT. W. M. RUST,
Attorney at Law.
