WINE OF CARDU is doing this for thousands of American women to-day. It cured Mrs. Jones and see 5 why see writes this frank here:

Glendeane, Ky., Feb. 10, 1901. I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui is helping me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own work without any help, and I washed last week and was not one bit tired. That shows that the Wine is doing me good. I am getting feshier than I ever was before, and sleep good and eat hearty. Before I began taking Wine of Cardui, I used to have to lay down five or six times every day, but now I do not think of lying down through the day.

How to Estimate a Biver's Width. To measure the width of any ordinary stream, or even of a goodsized river, it is necessary to make use of only your eyes and the brim of your hat. That seems queer, doesn't it? But it's true.

and here is the way to do it: Select a part of the river bank where the ground runs back level, and, standing at the water's edge, fix your eyes on the opposite bank. Now, move your hat down over your brow until the edge of the brim is exactly on a line with the water line on the other side.

This will give you a visual angle that may be used on any level surface, and if, as has been suggested, the ground on your side of the river be flat, you may "lay off" a corresponding distance on at. To do this you have only to hold your head perfectly steady, after getting the angle wish your hat brim, supporting your chin with your hand, if necessary, and turn slowly around, until your back is toward the river.

Now, take careful note of where your hat-brim cuts the level surface of the ground as you look out over the latter, and from where you stand to that point will be the width of the river-a distance that may readily be measured by stepping. If you are careful in all these details you can come within a few feet of the river's width. Phila North American.
