Miss Thomas helds-and, we think, rightly, that one important reason for our industrial success is that we educate our girls at least as well as our boy. American intelligence and energy are at the bottom of American success, and of course, the intelligence of any people must be raised by educating its girls. The iden, to which the minds of learned Germans are at present so hospital, that we are tending, hag-ridden, to extinction because we educate our girls too well, is one of the most amusing bugaboos that learning ever disclosed. Yet every thing may be overdone, and college education for American girls may be now somewhat overdone. By no means all thoughtful people are as sure as Miss Thomas is that a college education is the best possible thing for all girls who can have it. The impression that it impairs femininity does exist, whether it is reasonable or not. -Harper's Weekly.

In a recent lecture delivered before the Royal Institute in London, Mr. Ernest Rutherford has called attention to a possible new phase of the problem as to the earth's age, which has resulted from the study of radium and its properties. It is believed that radium is matter-possibly primeval matter-undergoing dissolution. Other eleicents, such as iron, copper, and gold, may have experienced a similar dissolution in the infinite past, or may now be undergoing it, yet so slowly that the phenomenon cannot be perceived. In this process radium gives off an amount of energy unparalleled elsewhere, thousands of times greater than any chemical reaction, but there is almost no that the energy existing in a pound or two of radium would probably continue to manifest itself for a period of 50,000 years. It is known also that while radium is found nowhere in quantity it is widely diffused and may occur more abundantly in the interior of the earth than at the surface. Considering these facts, there is some reason for assuming that the earth's internal heat may be due in part, at least, to the presence of radio-active substances. The import of this conclusion is ap-
