Ayer's Hair Vigor

Losing your hair? Coming out by the comb? And doing nothing? No sense in that! Why don't you use Ayer's Hair Vigor and promptly stop the falling? Your hair will begin to grow, too, and all dandruff will disappear. Could you reason-ably expect anything better?

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is a great tonic with the hair falling out very badly, but the hair began to grow and my hair is all right."—W. C. Loebson, Lindsay, Cal.

It cures itching scalp, dandruff, and all other troubles connected with the hair.

HOW DID THEY GET THERE.

One of the officers on Col. Youngblood's staff writes to a friend that they are frequently finding objects which are strangely out of place. A few months ago when they were at Khaba Jong, this officer picked up a pair of gloves bearing the name of a well-known London maker; while in the Tang Pass a private picked up a small, well-thumbed English dictionary, with a carte de-visite of a young Englishman pasted on the flyleaf.

Quite a curious chapter might be written on these two finds were it possible to discover the owners of the lost property. They indicate, at any rate, other out of the way finds.

A relative of a friend of the writer was at the battle of Khar-tou, when Lord Kitchener finally broke the power of the Mahdi, and rendered futile the hostility of the dervishes against the British advance. Upon one of the dead dervishes was found a single eyeglass of undoubted Mayfair cut. How did the dervish come by it? Sir Henry M. Stanley, the great explorer, had in his library at Richmond Terrace, Whitehall, many curious finds which he came across in his wanderings across the dark Continent of Africa. One is a silver-plated fork bearing the name of a fashionable London restaurant. This fork was found in a part of Africa which had never before been trodden by the foot of a white man till Stanley had broken the record and arrived there with his little band. A pigmy, whose tribe was unknown till then, was wearing the fork around his neck as an ornament.

Emin Pasha in his memoirs relates that one of the greatest glories of an Abyssinian chief he knew was a George III wig, which adorned the chief's head on very special occasions. How he came by it was a mystery even to Emin Pasha himself. This headpiece bore the name of a London maker.

A sergeant in the Manchesters, who was present at the fall of the native fort at Central when our troops captured it, picked up a money-lender's circular of comparative recent date. How it found its way to that distant region of India will ever remain a mystery.

Most interesting volume might be written on these little mysteries so strangely out of place. In one case only was the mystery of an object out of place cleared up. Older Answerites will remember the Zulu war, and how, in its course, the Prince Imperial was killed. The body was stripped.

The royal mother—the ex-Empress Eugenie, who is still living, after the first pang of her great sorrow was over inquired of her late son's brother officers if the Zulu had taken a keepsake which the prince was wearing around his neck at the time of his death. This keepsake was a religious emblem known as Agnus Dei. It had been taken.

Soon afterward a great British victory was won, and some hundreds of the dusky warriors were taken prisoners. Quite by accident a British officer discovered, suspended around the neck of a Zulu, the missing emblem. It was taken from the man and sent at once to the childless Empress, in whose possession it now rests, and forms her greatest treasure.—Answers.

No Pity Shown.

"For years fate was after me continuously," writes F. A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala. "I had a terrible case of Piles causing 24 tumors. When all failed Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me. Equally good for Burns and all other skin ailments. Only 25c at Staton & Zoeller's."

Bank Cashiers.

"Misery loves company," and crime, exposed or unexposed, is often misery in its most terrible aspect. The defuncting cashier of a broken bank in Aurora, Ill., tries to place himself before the public rather as a fairly representative bank cashier than as an exceptional case. He says to a reporter of a Chicago paper:

"I simply did what half your successful cashiers in Chicago have done. In my case the result was disaster; in their case it is success. Everything depends on the turn of the cards. Look at the case of one very prominent banker. Ten years ago he hadn't enough money to pay a hotel bill; today he is a millionaire. Do you think he saved it out of his salary?"

If by "successful cashiers" this unfortunate man means those who have made large fortunes in that position, he is probably right; but it is altogether probable that the average bank cashier in Chicago or in any other city is an honest man. It is a fact that the crime of speculating with funds of a bank or trust company is just as great when the speculation turns out to be profitable as when it results otherwise; when it affords opportunity and "respectability" to the operator as when it lands him in a penitentiary. The relative criminality of the act is in no wise changed by the outcome.—Washington Post.

The Raleigh Morning Post for the Campaign.

The present year promises a series of intensely interesting political developments. The season has arrived for County, District and State Conventions. In County, State and Nation both sides are lining up for warm and fierce contests, and all signs point to the most interesting campaign in the lifetime of the present generation.

To aid the people of North Carolina in keeping posted, the Raleigh Morning Post is making a most liberal campaign offer as follows:

One Dollar will pay for the Daily Post until after the National Convention in July. Two Dollars will pay for it until after the election in November.

Any persons sending us a club of six names for either of the above periods, together with the money paying for said subscriptions, may have one copy for the same length of time free.

All subscriptions and remittances should be sent to The Morning Post, Raleigh, N. C.

Brutally Tortured.

A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equaled. Joe Goldick, of Colusa, Calif., writes: "For 15 years I endured insufferable pain from Rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried everything known. It came across Electric Bitters and it was the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble." A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for Liver and Kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by Staton & Zoeller.

Working Day and Night.

The busiest and mightiest little things that ever Life Pills. These pills change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fog into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health! Only 25c per box. Sold by Staton & Zoeller the druggist.

Taken to The Asylum.

The county authorities have succeeded in getting W. H. Whitaker into the asylum at Raleigh. This will be grateful intelligence to persons residing within a block of the jail. He is violently insane and his ravings especially at night could be heard afar off.

A. Turner acting for Sheriff Harris left with him this forenoon for the hospital for the insane at Raleigh.

The insane negro girl has been sent temporarily to the County Home, but daily an order for her admission to the asylum in Goldsboro is expected.

LABOR AND IMMIGRATION.

Today there is no surplus of employment. In such a case every laborer who lands at Ellis Island is likely to become a claimant for some other man's job within a week. It is already something of an effort to sustain the scale of wages and make it adequate to the high cost of living. Those who have put the crowded stateroom and the foreign slum far behind them demand homes of comfort, decent clothing, cleanliness, school privileges for their children, and a little comfort and recreation for themselves. Those who emerge from the stateroom are content to live ten or twenty in a cottage, with utter disregard for comfort, cleanliness, and privacy. They are glad if they can go to the market and buy the poorest stuff for their daily food. They are content with a box of straw for a bed, with one suit of clothes of the cheapest material and never changed until it wears out. They have been used to working ten and twelve hours for a few cents a day, and so they are eager to understand a native laborer, since the wages they would still receive would be double their former compensation in the old country. Their children enter into the factories at the earliest possible moment. Our American toilers have already decided concerning their willingness to compete with Chinese coolie labor, and their answer seems to be so final that no administration dares suggest a restoration of Chinese admittance. It is evident that opportunity is narrowing down as population becomes more dense, and it seems but a question of time when the American laborer must decide whether he will be willing to live in less luxurious fashion, or whether he will say: "Hold!" to the tide of competition that tends to pull him down.—N. W. Tribune.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. The Campaign.

The Republicans have lost West Virginia from the start. Their campaign begins with that disadvantage. The State was carried by Mr. Cleveland three times. It was carried by Hancock and Tilden. Its six Electoral votes went to Mr. McKinley in 1896 and in 1900. It has come to be considered a Republican State. In early election forecasts nobody counted on it as a Parker State, and it was put in the Republican column. West Virginia does not go Republican when Henry G. Davis interests himself to have it go Democratic. With ex-Senator Davis nominated for the Vice Presidency, the Republicans have about as much chance of carrying Texas as they have of getting West Virginia. For reasons which are not far to seek, Maryland also now becomes a sure Democratic State. The Republican campaign opens to the surprise and shock of the first great break in Mr. Roosevelt's "luck." Last Saturday morning it was everybody's tongue that his fortune was at flood tide. Judge Parker's gold standard telegram to the St. Louis Convention must be reckoned the greatest political and personal disaster that has ever befallen the President. He and his friends for a few hours were looking complacently forward to an assured victory. They now see before them an arduous campaign of such uncertain issue that they cannot afford to spare any effort or miss a single point. The telegram from Boopas startled the Republican hosts in their emancipation quite as much as it disturbed the delegates in the Convention hall.

A condition even more unexpected and untoward is the sudden eclipsing of Mr. Roosevelt. A month ago who would have had the hardihood to say that this exceedingly popular, original, stirring, and ever active man, always doing or saying something which attracts the public eye and provokes floods of comment, who never since he succeeded to the Presidency has been second to any American in respect to the public notice he attracted, and who as a spectacular personage is perhaps the only man on earth to be compared to the German Emperor, would suddenly in one brief moment pass out of sight and mind, while every eye was turned upon another American, of whom, up to a time still quite recent, the public was not thinking at all? Judge Parker has become the most massive and conspicuous figure in the country. The President of the

The Woman That Dared.

The fears of certain eminent observers that American youth were becoming effeminate through association with women teachers in the public schools apparently need not alarm us greatly if we but pause long enough to consider what the women are doing. That they themselves display a firmness of fiber, a resourcefulness and aggressiveness that would sufficiently equip any man to save him from the charge of effeminacy is abundantly shown. Scarce a day passes without some notable evidence of the truth of this. The champion of yesterday's happenings alone have two shining examples of woman's ability to lay aside her softer attributes and become stern enough to satisfy even President Roosevelt.

Our own Brooklyn furnished one of these examples of woman's ability to assume a masterful role. Mrs. Mary Herrmann was visited in her small corner grocery by two men whose manner was suspicious. Suspicion deepened to certainty when she saw one of the two behind the counter in the immediate neighborhood of the cash till. Mrs. Herrmann grasped the situation and the sugar scoop simultaneously, and ran at him with such effect that by the time she found breath to scream and thus, to secure assistance her man was in condition to hand over to the police. Which not only reflects credit upon the lady, but adds a new weapon of offense to the already long available list.

The other case of feminine vigor and resourcefulness in the face of danger comes from far off Kentucky, where Mrs. Lucie Morris took a panther away from her child. Once she had him on the run, it was a simple matter to get down her husband's rifle and put an end to that particular panther's perniciosity activities.

But the beating off in the first crowded moment or two of the panther's appearance was done with the oldest of feminine weapons, the house-hold broom, thus demonstrating beyond any doubt the more or less humorous traditions concerning the effectiveness of that implement have a firm basis in sober fact.—New York Telegram.

County Canvass.

Thus far with probably one exception the county canvass of the candidates has been free from personalities and good nature has prevailed at every meeting.

Of course all the candidates are not orators, and to stand up before a crowd to make a speech even if it consists only in a brief announcement of one's candidacy is tortuous. One candidate tells the reporter that it breaks him all up.

Another says that at night he maps out a fine speech that he will make the next day; that he comes to it over in his mind on the way to the meeting, but the moment he mounts a goods-bag or rostrum every word is gone, and with terrible grammar and faltering voice can barely manage to say that he is a candidate. At first he forgot to use the stereotyped phrase, "Thank you for your attention." Reminded of this the next time in essaying to capture voters he began with thanking the people for their attention and then had the utmost difficulty making the usual announcement of his candidacy.

One candidate who has the stage fright to a remarkable degree is said to be actually losing flesh, and he himself admits that he would not be surprised if such was the case. Still it is all good natured and the voters who turn out to hear them enjoy it and the absence of oratory or the presence of timidity is not taken unfavorably against any one.

The grand round up will be here in August when a large crowd should greet them and help restore their confidence.

A Cemetery is a Necessity.

If the people of this community desire the maintenance of a cemetery here it is time they were bestirring themselves, for the town commissioners will deed the cemetery property back to Mr. Lloyd at their regular August meeting. Unless a private stock company is organized for the purpose of buying and maintaining this cemetery for burial purposes, it will be abandoned as a cemetery and then the town and community will be confronted by a condition that could have been avoided if prompt action had been taken.

A movement is on foot, however, to form a company to buy this property and maintain it for burial purposes. The requisite amount of stock should be subscribed before the first Monday night in August if Tarboro is to have a place to bury its dead.

Prompt action is needed in this matter. It will be too late to complain if the cemetery is permanently abandoned.

The Best Preparing a Success.

Washington, July 15.—O. F. Cook, the discoverer of the Guatemala boll weevil eating ants, has wired the department of Agriculture from Texas that the new ants are destroying cotton boll worms and are attacking similar injurious insects with even greater avidity than they do the boll weevils.

Another important fact is that the ants do not injure at all the lady-bird larvae, which are beneficial insects. Mr. Cook reports that the agricultural value of the ants now depends chiefly upon adaptation and rapidity of propagation. These matters are being investigated.

The Republicans Active.

A notice which appears elsewhere calling for a meeting of the republicans of this county August 13th, shows that the political enemies are not disposed to let the election here go by default.

No republican will estimate the probable number of the adherents to that party in this county. All put on a wise and knowing look and say that reports come from all sections of the county that their are citizens who desire to act with them. Two years ago this same circular talk was indulged in, but the great numbers never materialized. A few men can do a lot of talking but more than a few are required to do a lot of voting.
