The Folly of Worry.
"I ain't gwineer worry any mo' over what's a-comin'," said Brother Williams. "Yer I is, bro'er-headed beto' my time, an' all on account er worryin' 'bout what pas' en gone en what gwineer happen. I once knowed a man dat beam tell of a railroad wreck. He suz't on de train, but dat didn't make no diffrnce ter him. He sot right down—he did—an' thought 'bout what might er happened ef he'd been on dat train—how many leg's he'd had broke, an' mebbe his head would er been knocked sideways, an' him not havin' no accident policy! An' he worried 'bout it so his wife left him, an' he married a widdier 'omma dat made him take out an accident policy, an' put him on de train an' kept him gwine yer an' dar twel de train rounned off en kilt him. sho' enough! An' wen de widdier put a moniment over him, she put a writin' on it, sayin' 't wuz all fer de bes', an' she wuzn't gwineer call him back no' mo'; an' she persuaded another man ter marry her; but he wuz wise de widdier, an' she never could get him on er railroad train—though I hear tell she's still livin' in hopes!"—Atlanta Constitution.

The Temperature in The Klondyke.
Thomas Dixon, Jr., author of "The One Woman," and Edward E. Rose, the well known stage director, while watching and directing the rehearsals of the new Dix-on play fell to talking about the temperature in the Klondyke, where the last three acts of the play are located.
"I suppose the players ought to wear real heavy clothes," said Mr. Dixon, "as it is pretty cold up there."
"Cold," said Stage Director Rose, "cold—well I should say it was cold. Why Dixon, do you know, I knew a Brooklyn man who went up there to dig gold. One night while wearing a bear skin suit over three heavy suits of woolen underwear he was frozen stiff in his bunk. The miners shipped his body back to Brooklyn and his family decided to have the remains cremated at Greenwood."
"After they had him in the oven at the cemetery for half an hour one of the miner's brothers opened the red hot door. While the door was ajar everybody in the little chapel was started by the deep bass voice floating out on the heat and saying: 'For heaven's sake shut that door. I'm afraid I'll have a chill. This is the first time I've felt warm since I arrived in the Klondyke.'"
Mr. Dixon looked long and hard at his friend Rose, then shook hands with him and said: "Rose, you certainly missed your calling. You should have been an author. As a story teller you are a wonder."—Ex.

Got Blackburn Going.
The Democratic Executive Committee is hot after Congressman Blackburn, since his failure and refusal to meet Hackett on the spot and answer the charges of political corruption, and will now flood the Eighth district with circulars containing the affidavits of McEwen, whom he refused to serve, with his brother, a term in the penitentiary. A copy of this circular, in which there is the sworn charge that Blackburn accepted money and promised McEwen immunity from the law, has been mailed to President Roosevelt, Secretary Shaw, Attorney-General Knox, Speaker Cannon and other big republicans. Mr. Hackett has repeatedly served notice upon Blackburn that he was making use of these charges on the stump, and asked him to joint debate, for the purpose of making them face to face. The lily white is not going to do this; not their methods.

ENGLAND SAYS NO ALUM IN FOOD

In England and France the Sale of Alum Baking Powder is prohibited by law because of the injurious effects that follow its use.

The law in the District of Columbia also prohibits Alum in food.

You may live where as yet you have no protection against Alum. The only sure protection against Alum in your Baking Powder is to

A Jim Crow Passport Law.
No suggestion has been received with more interest in political circles in Washington than the plan credited to Senator Tillman for the inauguration of a negro passport law in the south. The question is one which will effect northern communities only indirectly, in that it may give them some of the at present exceedingly surplus negro population of the southern states. Politicians in Washington of all shades of opinion have evinced the deepest interest in the suggestion, but few of them are willing to talk for publication. Some of them effect not to take it seriously, and pass it along with Senator Hoar's famous proposal to set aside an island to which anarchists could be transported and allowed to live in enjoyment of their own creed. It is quietly admitted, however, that the passport proposal cannot be disposed of in the same light way. It is likely that it will form an important issue in the coming elections, and it is characterized as one of the few practical proposals looking to a solution of the race problem.

As to Voting.
Each voter must have resided in the State two years, six months in the county and four months in the election precinct. Where a person has not resided in a township four months, he may vote in the precinct from which he removed or which he lived prior to the removal. Revisal of 1905 Sec. 4,316.

A Four-Story Farm.
From Howard county comes the tale of a four story farm. Charles Ridgeway is its owner, and the farm is located near Fayette. Mr. Ridgeway has a fine clover field. Beneath the clover is one of the richest beds of coal, and underneath the coal is a fine bed of shale, from which excellent building brick are made. In and above the clover is an apple orchard, on which there is an abundant crop of apples. This makes a four story farm—shale, coal, clover, apple—and shows how the wealth is piled up in Missouri.—Columbus Herald.

The Law's Delay.
If Harry Thaw had killed Stanford White in London instead of in New York, he would have been indicted and tried for it long ago, and that is the one great reason why it is a more serious matter to kill a man in England than it is in America. Human life is cheap in the land of the free and the home of the brave. Not a long time ago an eminent judge in a large city of the Mississippi Valley, charging the grand jury, said: "The life of a man in this town is worth about $25."
Given a shrewd and an unscrupulous attorney, these contingencies, a little money, and your murderer can shake his finger at justice in this country. We are an emotional and a sentimental people. We have got more means than all the rest of mankind, and have more hysteria. There is some thing fascinating in an outrage, murder. At first we are horrified, but in a little while we get sorry for the prisoner; public opinion goes out to him, and the jury catches it, and the accused is turned loose. Daily there are miscarriages of justice in our criminal courts.
