ENGINE FALLS INTO RIVER.

Thursday evening the wagon containing a new engine for John P. McDowell's saw mill 8 miles from her gained such momentum, going down the long steep hill on this side of Bell's bridge that the driver lost control or became so frightened that he leaped to the ground. The four mules drawing it dashed along. till the draw on the bridge + as reached, then the wagon struck the side and the was knocked off, the wagon tongue was broken and a wheel or two injured, but the greatest damage that Mr. McDowell sustained will be the raising of the 5,000 pound engine, 50 horse power, from the bottom of the river.
