BIGGEST IN AMERICA.

Great Performing Lions to be Seen Here Soon. There are some wonderful lions with the John H. Sparks Shows, which will exhibit here Monday.

They are not only of amazing size and beauty, but they have been trained to do some of the most thrilling acts ever presented to an audience. Mons. Doucet, the world's greatest lion tamer, was born and raised in the jungles of equatorial Africa, and from childhood was accustomed to hear the roars of the man eating kings of the forest that prowled about his cabin at night. His father once captured some lion cubs which he trained to aid him in his hunting expeditions. Thus reared, the boy became naturally a lion tamer and hunter. Selecting some cubs from the largest species known, he reared them and educated them to perform feats that would illustrate the amazing strength and agility of these beasts.

A pair of these great animals will be turned loose in a great arena enclosure, in full view of the audience. Mons. Doucet will enter this astonishing performance. It is the most thrilling act of the kind ever seen and will never be forgotten by the beholder.

Like every other act and feature presented with the John H. Sparks Shows it is far away and superior to anything of the kind ever seen before. There are numerous other trained animal acts, in which ferocious tigers, leopards, hyenas, ferocious elephants, etc., will obey the commands of their fearless masters. No one should miss this great show.

Making it Clear. I like the tariff speeches, for the more I read of them, the more I do not know and thus I can rely upon my Congressman. Upon the very slightest hint He gets unending leave to print. And when he prints a speech you see He takes and mails it out to me. It makes it very clear just how I pay more than I do now For socks and gloves and baby's dress. While I pay more they cost me less. And then he shows me where I lose By paying somewhat less for shoes. For, though I pay less than before, My shoes they really cost me more.

He makes it very clear to me That what I lose I gain you see. And on such things as clothes and shoes I seem to gain, but really lose. Thus, if I buy my socks too low, They'll still be higher don't you know.

And shoes I thought were high last fall Were really low shoes after all. You see, if I pay less for shoes Or hats, the maker has to lose. And if he loses, then you see He charges up the loss to me. Now, when I have to pay him more, He reckons profits to his score. And thus there is a share for me In all of this prosperity.

The speeches shed a radiant light Upon the theme and make it bright: I merely read them o'er and o'er And find more's less and less is more.

In buying hat or coat or vest, Dear's cheap and cheap is dear at best. High's low, low's high; far's near, near's far. Light's dark, white's black,—and there you are!

Speculation in Commodities. On the Chicago Board of Trade, every year more than four times as much wheat is sold as was ever grown during any year in the whole world. The same thing, with cotton is the commodity gambled in, happens on the floor of the New York Cotton Exchange. In both wheat and cotton the price has often been advanced to inflated proportions by transactions that have been purely gambling transactions—that is, the in the finals; no wheat or cotton has actually been transferred from seller to buyer. The main evil of gambling in products which enter into daily consumption is that the price of the commodity is really advanced by the process. Millers have already felt obliged to make a raise in the price of flour because of the great raise in the price by the manipulation of wheat "futures."

Of course, those who are managing the speculative deal are putting out the talk that there is a world shortage of the bread grain to go around, and so often that it is surprising that it should ever be heeded. Sully worked cotton up to 17 cents per pound by continuing to buy and keeping up the ding dong that there was not enough cotton in the world to supply the demand for shirtwaists. Sully finished his campaign "busted," and there has been enough cotton to go around ever since. Joe Letter sent wheat up to $2 and there was an early rumor that he had coined millions. When the truth was known it was found that his father, who went to his rescue, was out $4,000,000.—Baltimore American.

FIFTEEN DOLLARS AN HOUR.

Is the Jury Cost to the County in the Superior Court. W. S. Clark, who is a most clear-headed man, with a decided turn for figures and with the happy faculty of placing them where they point a moral, estimates that the jury cost in the Superior court is $15 an hour.

He arrives at this conclusion in this way: There are on an average 20 petit jurors, or about 25 men held subject to jury duty and drawing pay, $50. There are 18 grand jurors, $25. There are the constables or officers of the jury bring the cost up to $90. Court sits about six hours a day, hence the fifteen dollar an hour.

As a recorder can be had who will cost not more than one or two dollars an hour, it would seem that a recorder's court for this county would be a saving to the tax payers.

As such a court would expedite trials, prevent defendants and their witnesses from attending court day after day, it would seem that such a court would be a decided saving to citizens who have to attend court.

Newspapers and Jurors. We observe that a Judge in Louisiana, in passing on the qualifications of jurors, ruled that opinions formed from reading newspaper accounts of occurrences are simply impressions and should not be regarded as fixed opinions.

This seems to us to be, as most cases, a most sensible ruling. If the jury system is not to become a mere farce, some such practice as this must become general. It is not creditable to a sensible people that they should encourage a practice that rules out of the jury box the most intelligent part of the community, as they do when they exclude people who have read accounts in the newspapers and formed a casual opinion of the merits of the case. Surely intelligent men must be very few who would form a fixed opinion from reading a hastily prepared story in the newspapers, as most newspapers' accounts must be prepared, that could not be shaken when the evidence under oath is presented carefully and comprehensively in court.

It seems to us that there should be a statute prescribing more accurately the qualifications of jurors to this matter of reading the newspapers.—Stanton Dispatch.

Man Can't Feel Pain. Medical experts are puzzled by a strange case of insensibility to pain that allows a man to bury his hand in his flesh and drive nails in his forehead. The "insensible man" is a cook by profession, 25 years old, and is in jail charged with rifling a slot machine of less than a mark in change. The prisoner admits the charge, but maintains that he acted while in a trance.

"My hands and fingers must have moved without me taking any cognizance of the fact. I doubt even that I observed the act with my own eyes," is his plea. Asked to explain, the prisoner said that he could not always control the actions of his hands and limbs; that they often acted independently of his will and that they were insensible either to steel or iron. To prove this he begged to be allowed the use of a lady's hatpin and buried it repeatedly in the calf of his leg, his heel, his cheek and the fleshy parts of his arm and hand.

Ten minutes after being returned to a cell he called out to the keeper: "Ask the Judge and experts to come down here. I will show them a new trick."

As the professional gentleman filed up in front of the cell the prisoner showed them a nail, and before he could be prevented, knocked it into the center of his forehead with the heel of his boot. Then he hung his coat on the nail, asking how they liked the new clothes-horse. The nail, which was sharp and about four inches long penetrated the bone and flesh to the extent of one and a half inches, yet the prisoner felt absolutely no pain, either when he drove it in the nail or afterward. Insanely certain that the man is not in sane, and that he does not suffer from hallucinations.—Berlin Cor. News.

Swept Over Niagara. This terrible calamity often happens because a careless boatman ignores the river's warnings—growing ripples and faster current. Nature's warnings are kind. Blankenship, of Belk, Tenn. Only 50c at W. H. Macneil's.

The New York city department of finance has made public a statement of the funded indebtedness of the municipality down to November 30, 1908. At that time there was a funded debt outstanding of $794,106, and a temporary debt of $32,378,300, making a combined gross indebtedness of $386,484,389.

CHINA FACING A CRISIS.

Friendship of United States Necessary to Avoid Ruin. That China is facing one of the most critical periods in her history, and that her salvation largely depends on the attitude and action of the American government, is the universal conviction of Chinese officials.

The anxiety is deep seated. Fear is openly voiced in all government circles that unless there is active manifestation of America's disinterested friendship, China will be forced on the rocks by the buffeting of intriguing powers.

Mr. Li Sun Ling voiced the popular sentiment today in an interview in which he said: "A crisis is unquestionably impending. My interviews with many of the most prominent officials has disclosed their full realization of this condition. Existing uncertainties are not due to any lack of capacity on the part of the Chinese, but to the ambitions of the foreign powers, the most dangerous arising from English aspirations for commercial domination at China's cost, and Japanese government intrigues.

The Japanese policy has been to bully China through demands whose unfairness is manifested by refusal to submit to The Hague for arbitration. The British policy is revealed in a sinister campaign attempt to destroy China's credit in the European markets to prevent the floating of railway loans on reasonable terms offered by the Germans. The situation prevents the most favorable opportunities for American capitalists, since China has no fear that American loans are accompanied by efforts for political domination. The time has arrived for America to assert her full share of influence at Peking. Hitherto English influence has been predominant. Since the acquisition of the Philippines all eastern questions are important to the United States. China would welcome the most active interest, recognizing its sincerity. English predominance in China is incompatible with the development of American interests."—Peking Dispatch to the New York Herald.

Facts About Beards. In Biblical times a shaven chin was the sign of leprosy. The Talmud says that the Pharisee of the Exodus had a beard an ell in length. In Greek sculpture the gods are always represented as bearded. Shaving comes to us from Egyptians this custom having existed among them from time immemorial.

Alexander the Great, having noticed that the enemy grasped his soldiers by their beards, thus holding them at a disadvantage, ordered every man in his army to shave. Mohammed recommends a dye for the beard, a red approximating a golden yellow. Shaving was introduced into Rome about the time of Alexander the Great, the Romans being in this, as in many other respects, copyists of the Greeks.

Scipio Africanus was the first Roman to shave every day. The beard was again fashionable in Rome from Hadrian's time on until the time of Constantine. The Lombards derive their name from the fact that their ancestors wore beards of tremendous length and were consequently called by the Romans Longbeards.

After the Moslem has prayed he takes out his comb and proceeds to combedly dress his beard. In other times every hair that fell out was broken in two and buried, that having been a form of covenant with some angel or other who was supposed to be diligently watching the process.

The Greek church, whose clergy have worn beards since the middle of the ninth century, is a great defender of the institution; whereas the Roman church repeatedly denounces it. The medieval clergy wore beards, but councils of the church have in time past ordered that the upper lip, at least, be shaved, so that no impediment may be presented by the mustachious to the clergy partaking of the holy chalice.

CIVIL SERVICE CAREERS.

Possibilities Shown by Successes of Hitchcock and Cortelyou. In the United States there is steadily increasing in the number of employees in the civil service. The total is already large enough to be a serious draft on the most promising of the nation's army of young men.

By frequent examinations the best are kept up so that those who fall below high standards have little chance of appointment. The hard road to success in the civil service, which develops the best qualities, the drafts which precedes success, does not deter the ambitious young man when nothing else offers. But the inducements which the civil service holds out are exactly the things which lure the young, even the ambitious. It gives an opportunity for one to earn a comfortable living with leisure to pursue the studies of a profession.

Of recent years the examples of Messrs. Cortelyou and Hitchcock, both employees in the classified service who have risen pieces of prominence in the political world, have added much to the attractiveness of a career by showing that it may carry great possibilities. The classified civil service is also sending constantly into private business and professional life a number of men who profit by the special experience which they have had under the government. Patent Office examiners become patent lawyers, and customs experts in the Treasury Department become custom-house attorneys. The Department of Agriculture is steadily sending men into the agricultural industry, and so the widening of the civil service with the general business of life has become much more close than would at first sight appear.—Boston Transcript.

CERTAIN RESULTS.

Many a Tarboro Citizen Knows How Sure They Are. Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tarboro. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens.

Nothing so skeptical doubter. Read the following statements which ought to be kept close by their possessors. It is not in vain that they are so widely distributed. They are just as true as the words of a prophet.

Mrs. J. W. Wallace, 1139 Albany St., Tarboro, N. C., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills benefited me greatly and I am pleased to recommend them. I suffered constantly from dull, nagging backache and distressing pains across my loins. I was very restless at night and arose in the morning tired and languid. I had so little energy or strength that I could hardly attend to my household duties and if I stooped or attempted to lift, sharp-drawing pains caught me in my back. My kidneys were also weak and charged considerably annoying. I finally read about Doan's Kidney Pills and got a box at Cook's drug store. They banished the backaches and pains, regulated the passages of the kidney secretions and made me feel better in every way. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone suffering from backache or kidney weakness."

Fate. You gave me my work to do, you brought and set it before me; I laughed with the laughter of one seeing, who understands; I bent to the task at hand, zeal like a man's o'er me.

Why did you break my wrists and shatter the strength of my hands? You gave me the song to sing, and mine the joy of the bringing. Strands of heaven and sea and earth string to the perfect note. Finished, glorious, whole, I raised my head for its singing.

Why did you seal my lips and crush the son in my throat? The work I was fain to do—it rusts in the drift of the sands; The song was fain to sing is waste for the winds' fust.

Why did you break my wrists and shatter the strength of my hands? Why did you seal my lips and crush the song in my throat? —Theodore Garrison, in Appletons.

PYGMIES FOUND IN BRAZIL.

American Rubber Hunters Find Race Once Described by E. J. Sullivan. Carleton M. Jones, now a resident of San Juan, Porto Rico, commissioner for a group of Boston capitalists, interested in the rubber industry of South America, has returned to New York after an absence of six months on an exploring expedition through the valley of the Amazon.

He penetrated the comparatively unknown region, where the Rio Negro has its source, and came in contact with what he believes was the identical race of pygmies discovered by Eben J. Sullivan at Boston in 1838, and verified by B. O. Halliburton, fellow of the Royal Geographical Society.

"I never knew Sullivan personally," said Mr. Jones, "but I was fully informed before I started for Rio de Janeiro of his experiences, because it happened that I was bound for the head waters of the Rio Negro to investigate the stories of a wonderful forest of rubber trees. Unfortunately the stories proved to be untrue, but I had the satisfaction of saving my employers from paying a large sum of money for a worthless concession. There are plenty of rubber trees, but not enough to warrant the investment my principals were asked to make.

"It took me sixty-eight days from the capital of Brazil to the wild Rio Negro country. I was accompanied by a nephew of the guide who was employed by Mr. Sullivan. For a week we traveled by canoe without seeing a human being, and then we came to the village of the queer little creatures, which I judge consisted of at least 5,000 inhabitants. They received us without surprise or emotion, due as I afterward learned to the fact that an immense feast of bear meat had, just been finished. Men, women and children were so gorgeously with food and with some sort of fermented liquor that they were stupid and sullen and paid little attention to their surroundings.

"In a couple of days they were hungry again and active and I had an opportunity to observe them more closely. Their average height is about four feet. They are misshapen and their large heads and faces are ludicrously out of proportion with their puny bodies and spindly bow legs. So far as I could determine the pygmies had no forms of government, and it was evident that they were not warlike because they seemed no weapons of any description. Many of them had no forefingers on the right hand. The evidence of amputation was plain, but it was impossible to learn why the fingers had been cut off.

"My guide spoke the language of several Indian tribes, but could not understand a word of the pygmies. I remained in the village a week and lived on a species of bean, mixed with maize and boiled. We brought away a number of gourds and copper ornaments as souvenirs.

NEW PALESTINE ARISING. Jews in Ancient Mother Country Are Building a Modern Nation. The large Jewish immigration to Palestine has included within recent years many writers, scholars and other professional men. This coteries has placed itself at the head of the movement for furthering popular education.

Various courses of scientific lectures are arranged in the largest cities on general educational topics and on special subjects, as, for example, the hygienic and economical conditions of the country, for the special benefit of immigrants.

In connection with these lectures other courses are mapped out. There are, for instance, classes where the languages of the country are taught to the immigrants. Much importance is attached to the teaching of Arabic, and not for political reasons at that, but mainly for practical purposes.

Another excellent means of education is the Jewish public libraries. The Jewish National Library stands in the first rank. This institution was intended by its founder to conform to the Jewish Museum.

In Palestine there are two important labor organizations, the Poale Zion and Hapoel Haizer. The former is radical and socialistic, while the latter is rather conservative. The former works under the banner of class strikes, organizes strikes, and tries to protect the workman against the supposed profits of the bread-givers. The latter endeavors altogether to do efficacious work in the best interests of the whole nation.

Especially deserving of mention are its public kitchens in Jerusalem, its libraries in Jerusalem and Pechah Tikwah, and the lecture courses held under its auspices, besides its various propagandistic activities and purely technical organization work. Not long ago a league of professional organizations was formed in Jaffa, and now steps are being taken for the establishment of co-operative institutions for the creation of necessary institutions for Jewish laborers in Palestine.—America, Hebrew.

BARACA MATTERS.

Officers Elected And Encouraging Reports Made. The First Baraca Class of Tarboro met in its Reading Room Thursday night for the purpose of electing officers and then business.

The following officers were elected: Walton Sage, President; Sam Carline, Vice President; G. B. Watson, Treasurer; Theo. Thomas, Secretary; John A. Weddell, Jr., Assistant Treasurer; T. H. Sanders, Corresponding Secretary; Harry Smith, Teacher; G. B. Watson, Assistant Teacher; John Clark, Commander-in-chief; Theo. Thomas, Chief Collected.

It was desired to send one delegate to the World-wide Baraca Convention to be held in Asheville June 15, 1909. The secretary's report showed that the class was doing very well. Last election of officers in October last we had enrolled 25 new members. We have 102 an increase of 76. A committee of three, T. H. Sanders, G. B. Watson and Sam Carline were appointed by the President to wait upon the Palestine class in having a Baraca-Philistia picnic the first week in May.

CHINA'S BENEVOLENT DESPOT.

Empress Dowager Arranged Successors to Throne. The law in China provides that the Emperor shall appoint his successor from the most worthy of his descendants or next of kin, but since the beginning of the last stage of the reign of the great Empress Dowager—from 1898 until her death—the only law in China has been the Empress Dowager herself. She could have said with greater truth than the French Louis, "L'Etat, c'est moi," and so far as will ever be known, it was by the sole act of her "excellent will" that the brother of the late Emperor Kuang Hsu was made prince regent, an office which constitutes him absolute ruler of China during the minority of his son. This son, the baby Emperor, by a process of double adoption, was made successor to Tung Chih, the son of the Empress Dowager, who died in 1875, and "heir" to the adopted son of Tung Chih's father. This eliminated Kuang Hsu from the imperial line on the ground that he was of the same generation as Tung Chih, and hence could not, according to him as ancestor, it was this that the great Dowager tried to do in 1898, when she deposed the Emperor and appointed the son of Prince Tuan successor to her son, Tung Chih, but the world objected, and she yielded. Now her wish has become a fact.

This is all very strange and complicated to the Western mind, but it was the "excellent will" of the Empress Dowager; and the power which her imperial majesty wielded, if one ignores the simple force of her own gigantic personality, is best explained by Mr. Hu Hsing-ming, who, in a brave but mistaken defense of her position against attack in the foreign press says: "By the first fundamental law of state in China, resting upon the principle of absolute obedience of children to parents, the supreme authority in the Chinese body politic, of his imperial majesty, the Empress Dowager, as mother of the nation, or country, admits absolutely no question of doubt." And that a majority of the people in China were in harmony with this opinion is also undeniable.—Senator Franklin Ragan in Everybody's.

SAVINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON.

Being the Confessions of the Seven Hundredth Wife and Translated by Helen Roland For the Washington Herald.

I charge thee, my daughter, waste not thy time upon a man who hath a sister. For his heart hath been grieved, and his sentiments wrapped in cotton batting. Verily, verily, many wives shall make a man a cynic, but one sister shall make a president. Yes, he needeth not a college education, neither doth he require the assistance of the Secret Service, that he may discover thy villainess. For she shall tell him all and more besides.

Lo, every sister constituteth herself her "brother's keeper," and guardeth him from other women as a pet lamb from the wolves. And unto him no woman is a mystery, but all are transparent.

Thou mark her cunning little ways, for she reacheth the pink notes, likewise the baby-blue ones, which he receiveth, and translateth their meaning, crying, "Beware! Also look out! For cannot thou not seeeth trap and hunt the cheese?" Yes, the words of thy mouth she interpreteth unto him, and whether they be wise or foolish, she twisteth them about thy throat with a strange hold.

Thou uncoverth to him thy false gifts, each one of them, even unto the coat thereof, and if he speaketh concerning thy youthful color, she scoffeth merrily, saying: "You it is a fresh color; for hath it not just been put on?"

Lo, she teacheth him the ways of a damsel with a curling iron, and putteth him through the incalculable of the dress that hooketh up the back. She showeth him the difference between a maiden in cold cream by daylight and a maiden in a hammock by moonlight. She revealeth him no diamonds!

Then I charge thee, if thou wouldst marry an optimist, seek for him in an orphan asylum. For a lone orphan is a jewel! He believeth all women to be that which they appear, even a perfect thing which is born in a Doucet gown, and cometh into the world wearing a sweet smile and smelling of new mown hay. For he hath not been warned, neither warped.

Thou hide of a cow weighs about 35 pounds, but that of a horse is about half that amount.

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble prevys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine smells like the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, it is the case of the child's health, the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This important trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as many people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable by kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon manifested. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may feel sure that the name, Dr. E. C. Kitchin & Co., Washington, N. C., is sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. E. C. Kitchin & Co., Washington, N. C., on every bottle.
