THREE GREAT PROPOSITIONS.

The education of every boy and girl today, in our humble judgment, received from the public schools of our country, must be based upon the three great propositions—Humanity, with all its surroundings; Honesty, Industry. The feeling of humanity that planted in the breast of the boy and girl by the beneficent rays that come from the teacher, will live forever; it matters not in what walk in life it may be; whether in the school room, counting house, shop, farm or profession. The humanitarian ideas that are inculcated in their minds while attending school, remain forever. If these are based upon the thought that the feelings of a fellowman must be respected, that the ties of kinship and fellowship are among the most beautiful and ennobling that can be planted in our hearts; if beyond all this, if the boy and girl are taught to look higher than the things of this world, then one of the foundation stones upon which education is based, is secure and the state is safe.

The common schools of our land must instill in the minds of every boy and girl the element of honesty; honesty to himself; honesty to his neighbor; honesty to his country. To these must be added a compensation to the teacher that will not make it worth while to use the teacher's place till something else turns up.

There is not a teacher in the public schools who should not be paid and justly, three times that now doled out.

FINED FOR KILLING SQUIRRELS.

Frank and John Dancy colored, were fined a dollar each for killing squirrels near Leggett. The season for squirrel hunting does not begin till October first.

MEETING OF NORMAL ALUMNALS.

On Thursday evening the Edgecombe Chapter of Alumnae Association of the State Normal College held an enthusiastic meeting. The purpose of this meeting was to plan for the observation of "Founder's Day," Oct. 12th. A programme and social evening will be arranged, and all former students of the Normal College will be expected to meet and give honor to the memory of our further extension of the individual ballot as it now stands.—St. Paul Dispatch.

GUILT IS ALWAYS PERSONAL.

After eight years of ostensible activity on the part of the government against the beef trust ten of the principal officials of the packing companies in the combination have been made to bring home to the responsible individuals the charge of personal guilt. Not one of the corporations through which they act is included in the Chicago indictments. It is a criminal proceeding, pure and simple, against so many men, not against mere corporate titles shielding their personality.—N. Y. World.

DELAYS OF THE LAW.

"I understand that you called on the plaintiff. Is that so?"
"Yes," replied the witness.
"What did he say?"
The attorney for the defense jumped to his feet and objected that the conversation could not be admitted in evidence. A half hour's argument followed, and the judges retired to their private room to consider the point.
An hour later they filed into the courtroom and announced that the question might be put.
"Well, what did the plaintiff say?"
"He weren't at home, sir," came the answer.

CHINESE PIGTAILS TO GO.

Before they were conquered by the Maocbus the Chinese wore their hair in knots on the top of their heads. The long queue, which the Celestial millions have been accustomed for ages was forced upon them by their conquerors, and it stood in the first instance for humiliation and submission. In course of time superstition grew up about the long braid. It became understood generally that the Chinese emigrant who cut off his queue while abroad forfeited by his act his chance of returning to his own land.

Consistent with the general news of advancing ideas in the Empire of the Sun is the item stating that the sacrifice of the queue is now to be general in the Chinese Army and in official circles. There has been already, on the occasion of the Festival of the Full Moon, a cutting off of distinguished pigtailed by Chinese merchants living in New York. The hair of our yellow brethren is to be worn henceforth even as our own. Self respect and personal sanitary interests both should be promoted by the change.—N. Y. World.

BANKING BLACKLISTS.

Addressing the national association of supervisors of state banks the comptroller of currency said he had in his office a list of men who as officers of national banks had proved incompetent and had been removed from office and said that if any of them should make application to organize state banks, their names would be furnished to the national system the names of the men who had been driven out of the state banks because the men behind them had been found incompetent or dishonest, that there was not enough business to make the proposed institutions profitable or that the applicant were men without standing within their communities. This plan of reciprocity between national and state departments if carried out in good faith, should work for the improvement of banking in general.—Buffalo Express.

THE FAMILY BALLOT.

A bill was introduced in the Wisconsin legislature making it possible for the wife of a man to cast his ballot, if he is prevented by business or by sickness from approaching the polls. The wife will arm herself with the document which proves her proxy powers will be admitted to the polling booth and will cast the family ballot for those candidates agreed upon in the family council.

It is a natural but a remarkable innovation. The truth is that the family ballot even those voters who think they are rendering independent judgment at the polls are in reality, if unconsciously, voting as the family mind has determined.

Such a performance will familiarize women with political process and prepare them for their own franchise. But it will also persuade them, it must be believed of the greater blessing of the family ballot and win them to work for this, instead of for any further extension of the individual ballot as it now stands.—St. Paul Dispatch.

THE SOUTHERNER'S SATURDAY SERMON

(By Rev. Bertram E. Brown.)

"When Jesus saw the multitude, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd. Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." St. Matt. 9: 36.

These words of our Lord are true of the situation today to a greater extent perhaps than ever before in the Church of Christ. The laborers are too few to gather the harvest of souls for God. There are not enough good and efficient men in the ministry of any of the churches to fill all the pulpits already established, much less to go out and found new churches where they are needed. The increase in the number of ministers has not kept pace with the increase in population nor the increased desire of men to hear the Gospel of Christ. There never was a time when there was greater need in God's cause for active, able, consecrated young men in the Christian Ministry.

There is no need for us to discuss here the several reasons to be given for this state of affairs, but we will try to say something to remedy it.

1. No man need hope for either success or happiness in the ministry unless he is truly called of God to that service, and conse crates all his heart and soul and mind and life to the single purpose of preaching God's word and winning souls for God. If he is only after money or fame or an easy time, he will fail miserably in his profession, no matter how great may be his eloquence, learning or personal charm. And on the other hand, any man who is truly called of God to the ministry, and goes into it devoting all he has to God's service, will have a satisfactory measure of success, no matter how poorly equipped he may be in eloquence or learning. So while no man need come into the Ministry hoping for success or comfort unless he feels called of God, on the other hand no truly consecrated man need keep out of the ministry because he fears he has not sufficient learning or eloquence.

2. It rests with christian mothers very often whether boys whom God needs in this sacred calling have their hearts turned in time to it. Every christian mother ought to be glad and proud to be a minister to her church if by prayer and training and teaching she can turn the heart of her son in that direction. Some women hesitate to put the matter before their sons because they think that in the ministry they will be doomed to a life of grinding poverty. That is a very mistaken idea. It is true that he must abandon all hopes of becoming rich, but on the other hand, if he is a consecrated man, he need never fear becoming utterly destitute. A man has on ly one chance out of many thousand of becoming rich in the business world. The vast majority of men fail to accumulate anything, but work hard all their lives, get little, and die poor. Only an exceptional few get even comfortable well off in the world. I should venture to say that the average minister of the Gospel is as well supplied with the necessities of life as the average man not in the ministry. You need not be afraid, Christian Mother, that God will let your son who gives his life to Him, suffer for his daily bread. God will see to it that he gets that, and as for the superfluous things of life, and for money hoarded up, if he is a christian, the lack of these things will not rob him of a moment's peace.

3. Every mother ought to be happy to see her son enter a calling where he is sure to be safe from the numberless temptations that surround the boy in every other calling and threaten his safety and honor. In worldly business, the mother sends out her son like a lamb among wolves, where if he remains pure and sober and honest it is in spite of the tendency of his environment to make him other wise. In the ministry she puts him in a haven of safety where every circumstance of his environment tends to keep him pure and honest and sober.

4. While you can serve God in any honest walk of life, and be a christian man in any innocent occupation, the fullest and highest service you can do for God is to give up all your time and devote all your energies to carrying His message to men and leading men to Him. If you start out to serve God at all, why stop short of the very highest service? If you feel after prayer and earnest seeking for God's will for you, that God wants you in His ministry, young man, do not resist the duty of doing your very utmost to serve God and your fellowmen. Give up all for Him and do Him the highest service!

5. There is no happier calling than that of a minister for one whose heart is in it. A perpetual blessing rests upon him, filling his soul with peace. He is sustained by the consciousness that he is doing God's will and not his own. There is a boundless field of work for him, so that he need never be idle; there is always one more sin ner for him to speak God's message to; there is never lacking opportunity to tell some poor soul of the Saviour's love; he is cheered and uplifted always by proofs that God has blessed his labor and heard his prayers; he is met on every hand by gratitude and affection from those to whom he has carried God's peace is love.

Ob, mothers with precious boys fit for the master's use would just give all their mother's influence to turn them towards God's highest service, how greatly would they be serving their own cause and their own, and God's need! And if bright, strong, earnest boys who standing on the threshold of life, hesitating which way to turn, would hear the Master's call, His urgent call, for labor to come and reap His harvest of souls He died to save, how usefully would their lives be spent for their own good and man kind's, and God's!

"The parish priest of Austerlitz, Climbed up in a high church steeple,
To be nearer God so he could hand
God's word down to his people.
At last God said 'Come down and die.'
And he cried out from his steeple,
'Where art Thou, Lord?' and the Lord replied,
'Down here among my people!'

NORTHWEST VINEYARDS

That several districts in the Pacific Northwest are much better adapted to the growing of grapes than the most famous vineyard localities of Europe is the declaration of Rudolph Schleisler, of Louisville, Ohio, who is now in the city. Mr. Schleisler recently returned from a year's visit in Great Britain and Central Europe, and while on his trip took occasion to visit the principal grape producing districts and some of the large wineries.

For the last twenty-five years Mr. Schleisler has been engaged in raising grapes in the Clear water country, above Louisville, and is one of the best informed men on the industry in the North west. In discussing the opportunities for grape growing in Oregon, Washington and Idaho he said:

"My recent travels in Europe and in the United States convince me that the care and are raising the finest quality of grapes that comes to the markets of the world. By virtue of the soil, climate and altitude we produce a better flavored, higher colored and larger grape than is found either in California or central Europe."

"In Southeastern France I found that the quality of grapes was practically on a par with ours. They have been raising grapes in that section for so many years that they have reduced the work to a science. If the people of the Northwest who are engaged in this industry would take as much care with their vineyards as the quality of the product would be much better than any in France or Italy."

"The latest grapes in Europe sell from $1 to $1.50 a pound. Of course it is only the wealthy class that can afford to buy them. If we could have an European market for our grapes there would be no limit to the demand for our product. In that event our vine yards would be easily worth from $4000 to $6000 an acre. With the prices that have obtained during the last few years our best vineyards have averaged a net income of from $400 to $500 an acre."

"There are many sections in Oregon which would be peculiarly adapted to grape growing. The lowlands, in my opinion, could be devoted to table grapes, while the high hills should produce a first class quality of wine grapes." —Portland Oregonian.
