24-Mile Detour To Open

A detour of approximately 24 miles on the Spartanburg-Tryon highway, which will be used for the next three months or longer, will be put into use Tuesday, it was announced Thursday. The detour will lead from the present highway near the end of the pavement just beyond the Southern Shops. It leads from a crossroad near the end of the hardsurfacing on the present highway and runs to the left and north to the old Blackstock road, crossing the railroad tracks just a few miles from the city. It proceeds to Sigsbee and thence through the Holston and Motlow sections to Gowansville. The road then follows the present route to Bird Mountain where it intersects the present highway. From near that point, it crosses the railroad on an overhead bridge and runs to the North Carolina line. --Spartanburg Herald.
