Sorghum Syrup Wanted for Relief

The federal surplus relief corporation is in the market for 115,200 gallons of sorghum syrup for distribution as a surplus commodity among relief clients. The government desires to purchase this product in the communities where it can be handled advantageously.

Anyone having syrup may possibly find a market for such if they will leave the information with any of the relief offices.

Purchases are to be of good grade, mild in flavor, not too dark, free from suspended materials, and free from dirt, packed in one gallon cans.

No expenditures can be made by brokerage fees or commissions, as the syrup will be purchased direct from the producers.
