Saluda Baby Hospital Have Visitors Today

Preparations have been completed for the visit of the friends and supporters of the Spartanburg Baby Hospital to Saluda today. The guests are invited to assemble at the hospital at 6 o'clock. The staff will be introduced, and the work of the hospital explained and illustrated.

The time is opportune for the building is filled to almost its utmost capacity with little ones in various stages of sickness or recuperation. Some are so frail that the spark of life has to be continually tended lest it be extinguished by any untoward incident. Some little ones have gone far on the road to recovery; their plump cheeks and firm little bodies tell the story of the conquest of disease. Some are ready to go home. And others may be coming in just at that hour.

More than 60 babies have been received this season, and the hospital has been a busy place from the very start. — Spartanburg Herald.
