Mrs. LeBeau and daughter, Miss Eloise LeBeau, who have been occupying the Von Kahlden house will return to Michigan the latter part of this week.

Watching a train struggling up Saluda Mountain just outside of Tryon recently, pushed by the "helper" engine which stays there just for the purpose, inspired me to dig into history to find when the first train scaled the mountain.

I found that, 59 years ago, the first train to cross the Blue Ridge at that point left Spartanburg for Asheville. It made the trip to Hendersonville all right but upon arriving there, was so exhausted that it took ten years for it to make the trip from Hendersonville to Asheville.—Majel Ivey Seay, in The State Magazine.
