WESTWARD, HO!

Henry D. Shankle, Jr. who was graduated from the Tryon High School the past spring, left on Monday morning about seven o'clock for Portland, Oregon to work his way through a business school. Henry is making the trip in an old Model T car which he bought last year for about $20. Many of his friends looked at the car and expressed their doubts as to his ability to make the trip alone in the tin lizzie, and a great deal of interest has developed in the progress of his trip. He promised to keep the Bulletin informed at each stop. The first card came today from London, Ky. He wrote:

Dear Force, Arrived in Corbin last evening (Monday) at seven o'clock. No trouble. All mountains are now behind. Level country ahead. T-model still hitting. This is life. Tell Mr. Wood and Roy, hello."

Henry's high school years were ones of activity and diversity. He didn't have a brilliant school record, but he passed, and on the outside lived a happy and useful life, which after all is what counts most. For a number of years he carried the Spartanburg and Asheville papers after school hours. In spare time he repaired bicycles for other boys and soon became the town's authority on bicycles. Sometimes painted houses for his father. He took the janitor's job at the Methodist church, and he was a good president of the Epworth League which gave him a farewell party a few days before he left. While a carrier for the Spartanburg paper he made a trip to Washington, D. C. last year with the newsboys, and later joined another group
