Does A College Education Pay?

Well, the Tryon Rotarians are trying to find out. A debate on the question started Friday at its regular meeting between two ministers, the Rev. C. P. Burnett upholding the affirmative and the Rev. Chas. G. Sewall defending the negative. Both men are college graduates and sent their sons to college. There has been a lot of doubt in the minds of many people as to the value of a college education. Outside the professions there are hardly more than four business men in Tryon who are college graduates. Even many graduates think the educational system needs to be revised in order to better prepare students with a practical education in order for them to earn a living and be self supporting. Anyway, it is a problem, and there was not enough time at Friday's meeting for the debaters to finish their arguments so the debate will be resumed next Friday.
