Dr. Taylor At School

Tryon, Nov. 19.—Dr. George F. Taylor gave a brief talk to the Tryon school children Tuesday morning at the regular chapel period. As this is National Book Week, he chose as his subject, "The History of Books". He traced their development from the stone volumes created by prehistoric man, up to the thousands of books printed today.

Dr. Taylor described some of the beautiful mural paintings in the Congressional library in Washington, which represent the various stages through which books have passed since the world began. He told how at first men built stone monuments to express their feelings; then they drew complicated word-pictures on skins, and later carved hieroglyphics in stone. Then came the discovery of papyrus, followed by the beautiful printings of Catholic monks; the transformation of these printed letters into blocks of wood, and finally the modern printing press was discovered.

"Reading is worth while if it leads you on to something else," said Dr. Taylor. "When you chance to read a book that you find interesting, it should make you want to go on to something else on the same subject. If you do this, you will be educated before you know it."

The Tryon school plans to celebrate Book Week still further by a special chapel program Friday morning, in which many children will take part.—Asheville Citizen.

'Where's Grandma' At Saluda, N. C.

A three-act comedy entitled "Where's Grandma?" will be presented by the Junior Woman's club at the Saluda school on Thursday evening, Nov. 21, at 8 o'clock, according to an advertisement in today's Bulletin. In the cast are Miss Anne Slaughter as grandma, Miss Elizabeth Avant is the heroine. Others are Doran Fisher, Woodrow Ward, Miss Whiteside and Walter Preston.

Beautify Approaches

John Paul Lucas, sales executive of the Duke Power Company, Charlotte, addressed the Tryon Kiwanis club on Tuesday noon at Oak Hall and praised the good things the community has done, but said that we needed to do more in order to catch the eye of the people who pass through, and make them want to stay and investigate the attractions of the place. He advocated more planting of parkways at the approaches of the city and keep the streets well-groomed, and remove all eye sores. A well-planned beautification program will have immediate effect upon all visitors and make them feel that this is a desirable place in which to live. Another essential is a food shop where good food and good coffee is served, especially good coffee. People will drive miles just to get a good meal. K. A. Bowen had charge of the program. Hoyt Prince gave the current events.
