

FILLERS

Bob Baldwin of Tryon, president of a gold mining company in South Carolina, has had some exciting experiences during his engineering career. About ten years ago while inspecting an iron mine in Minnesota the mine caved in about 80 feet down and buried Mr. Baldwin in dirt, debris and water up to his neck. He suffered a broken left leg, right arm and collar bone. He was unconscious about half the night hours it required rescuers to dig him out. A miner, only a few feet away, was killed instantly.

During this bad weather a lot of people sent laundry to Rector's where several thousand dollars worth of new equipment has been installed just to iron shirts. The cuffs are finished stiff, and the shirt is wrapped neatly around a stiff cardboard and encircled by a green band. So when Jack Moore pulled out his shirt drawer, he exclaimed, "My goodness! Mama's bought me a lot of new shirts for Christmas."
