Flood Notes

By Ralph C. Erskine, Jr.

If you think it has been raining in Tryon just read the following extracts from an interesting letter Ralph C. Erskine, Jr. wrote home from Hartford, Conn. where he is with the Hartford Electric Company:

"Thursday the water from the park river came across its banks and started to flood the streets in the section around our building. A motorboat which had been built in the cellar of the Ramp Garage floated up out of the gangway and was moored to a fire hydrant in the center of the business district. Two fire trucks were used together with about 4 portable pumps in a losing fight to keep the water from flooding our Pearl St. substation which feeds the midtown..

—The river rose to 38 feet, 6 feet higher than the 1927 flood. From the top of a department store I could see water stretching for miles across the Connecticut River valley, farms, woods, and towns apparently floating. Huge Shell gasoline tanks rose from their bases and floated majestically down the turbulent river along with sheds, barns, roofs and other wreckage sweeping steel high tension towers down like trees in a gale. South Meadow station shut down when the water could no longer be kept out, leaving the stricken city to grope in darkness

Holy Week Services

By Rev. C. P. Burnett

This is Holy Week. There will be services every day at the Church of the Holy Cross. Each afternoon, with the exception of Wednesday, there will be Evening prayer and address at 5 o'clock. On Thursday morning Holy Communion at 10 and on Good Friday morning prayer and sermon at 11 o'clock.

On Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 there will be mission study class conducted by Bishop Touret in the Parish Hall.

The rector and congregation extend a most cordial invitation to members of other churches to join in the services, feeling that they will be a helpful preparation for the Easter services to be held in the various churches next Sunday.

Mills-Henderson

Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Mills of Columbus, N. C. have announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Willie Odessa Mills to Mr. James C. Henderson of Ware Shoals and Simpsonville, S. C.

The marriage will take place on April 25 at home in Columbus. The Rev. Charles B. Trammel, pastor of bride-elect will officiate.
