This Month's Garden

During the blistering heat we have had recently all of us who grow the tall phlox must have felt grateful for its sturdy endurance under intense sunshine. Its long season of bloom is another great advantage to us: for we often find that flowers supposed to bloom "until frost" in the North, give out here after a few weeks. As far as I can judge, the much-advertised "Columbia" is a mildewed failure in Tryon, but "The Enchantress" "B. Comte"—and no doubt others—do extremely well. They must be watered in dry weather, preferably not by overhead sprinkling, as this is supposed to encourage mildew; and for the same reason as too sheltered situation should be avoided. Phlox seedlings should be carefully weeded out, as they have a tendency to revert to the magenta coloring, and being more vigorous than the older plants, will crowd them out, unless destroyed.

Dav lilies, especially the newer and finer kinds, are also a great help during the summer, being very little affected by heat and drought. Platycodons are drought resistant also, and should now be blooming well.

Chrysanthemums need careful watering and fertilizing through the summer (as well as ruthless dividing in the spring) but if they have had good care their fine foliage will be now giving a prosperous touch to the garden, even though the bloom is several weeks later.

The Baby Hospital

Spartanburg has an institution in North Carolina which was founded thirty-two years ago and which, in its time, has been the means of saving the lives of many infants and sending hundreds of others back to their homes in rugged health. We refer to the Spartanburg Baby Hospital at Saluda. It should also be said that tired and sick mothers who have accompanied their children to the hospital have been restored to health and have been taught better methods of caring for children.

Next Friday will be visitors day at the hospital, the day when its friends make their annual pilgrimage to Saluda to inspect the institution, encourage those who are patients and those who look after them. A committee has been appointed to request Spartanburg residents who are interested in the relief of underprivileged babies and their mothers to join the party which will make the trip to Saluda Friday evening and return to the city after supper. This is a fine charity and the invitation should be accepted by many residents.—Spartanburg Herald.

Detroit, July 13.—Deaths from the worst heat plague in Michigan's history mounted to 390 tonight as the sixth day of 100-degree weather brought temperatures to 111 degrees, the highest ever recorded in the state.

Out on the western prairies of Canada a new high mark of 112 was recorded at Emerson, Man. Dominion deaths mounted also.
