A New Friend

Lady Nancy Astor thrilled Tryon Sunday evening at the Parish House when she made a confidential friendly talk to the largest gathering that ever assembled at the Parish hall. Every seat in the house was taken forty minutes before the time set. The walls, porch and yard were lined with interested people many of them having come from Asheville, Spartanburg and other cities.

The distinguished guest was introduced by Mrs. Carroll Rogers. Both speakers requested that nothing be reported in the press quoting Lady Astor on account of the coming election, as she was the representative of a foreign government. So this reporter can only report briefly what he saw and nothing that he heard. As usual Chairman C. J. Lynch had everything arranged smoothly. The stage was attractively decorated with flowers, and the flags of the United States, Great Britain and North Carolina.

As informal as if she were talking to a group of friends in her living room she won the hearts of her audience immediately and kept her listeners entertained with friendly wit as she brought them in contact with international problems and other great personalities. She was a friendly, understanding fellow citizen urging the cultivation of a universal brotherhood of unselfishness that would help all peoples to work for their mutual benefit. The thrilled audience responded with enthusiastic applause. Tryon and visiting friends enjoyed a rare treat for which the community is indebted to Lady Astor's sister, Mrs. M. B. Flynn.
