One of the peculiarities of Nelson Jackson, Jr., is his thirst for iced tea every day at noon even in winter. Had he attended the Boston Tea Party one thing is certain, he would have been on time. With him promptness is an idiosyncrasy.

A nice, juicy steak smothered in onions is a delicacy to some people, but to Charlie Lynch, it is poison. He says there is no such thing as a little onion. "It can't be done."

Jack Horner of Philadelphia, a guest at Melrose Lodge, for several weeks, has not missed a meeting of the Rotary club in 12 years. Continued presence makes the heart grow fonder of Rotary, Kiwanis, Church, Home. Absence makes it go yonder.

Lefty Flynn, our warm-hearted, sympathetic, big brother of Tryon, couldn't bear the thought of a man being thrown out of his home and country, so he wrote Ex-Emperor Haile Selassie a sympathetic letter inviting him to come to Tryon. Imagine his surprise recently when he received a letter from the Emperor's secretary stating that his majesty planned to visit America sometime, and that when he did he would come to Tryon and visit Mr. Flynn. Hot Che!

Leland Butler was "embarrassed" a few days ago when he sold a suit of clothes from the Ballenger display window and had to leave the figure wearing nothing but its shirt, tie and underwear.
