"CURB" REPORTER

Right off the curb into the Postal Telegraph office is a marvelous machine called the teletype which resembles a typewriter. It is connected to wires from Charlotte. The telegraph operator in Charlotte writes on a similiar machine. It is really miraculous. George Bell, the local manager, sends messages the same way just by sitting down at the teletype and writing it out, and every telegraph office connected with the same wire will receive the massage at the same time . . . Another mysterious instrument in Tryon is the "hot stuff" machine at St. Luke's hospital. It is used to give heat for certain diseases. A rubber hose is placed over you and it heats you all the way thru. You are just as hot on the opposite side as on the side next to the heater. At the old fashion fire place you would freeze on one side and burn up on the other, but with this machine you are 'het' up all thru with enough electricity to light an electric bulb. The strange part about it is that wires are not necessary. The instrument is so sensitive that the current goes thru space and lights the bulb when near it, just like the old radios used to squeal when you got near them . . . Seth Vining, Jr., writes from the Jamboree for a "lot of Bulletins". Scout Ex-
