Navy Enlistments

A limited number of applicants for service in the United States Navy will be enlisted from this section of North Carolina during September according to an announcement by Lieutenant B. L. Doggett, the officer-in-charge of the recruiting district of North and South Carolina.

Young men who have graduated from high school are preferred but applicants with at least one year of high school or its equivalent will be considered. Applicants accepted must be between 17 and 25 years of age, of good character, mentally qualified, unmarried with no dependents, and must be in excellent physical condition.

Young men under the age of twenty-one can be enlisted only with the written consent of their parents or guardian. This consent is furnished on a special form.

All first enlistments are made in the rating of Apprentice Seamen. The term of enlistment is four years, except for applicants under eighteen years of age, who are enlisted for minority, that is, the enlistment expires the day preceding their twenty-first birthday.

The United States Navy offers a variety of duty and educational advantages. Upon completion of their initial training at Norfolk, Va., recruits are sent to sea for duty on ships of various types, or to the many trades schools maintained by the Navy. Schools are maintained for electrical, ordinance, radio, clerical, machinist metalworkers, woodworks, etc. All
