Taylor Speaks at Converse College Chapel Exercises

A miniature sermon, delivered by Dr. G. F Taylor, college chaplain, was heard yesterday morning at chapel exercises by students of Converse college.

He opened his short talk with a quotation from a letter he had seen which closed with the words: "I hope you may live all your life."

"The way to live all your life is to live only one day at a time," said Dr. Taylor. He gave seven rules with brief remarks about each.

"Be glad that you are alive. Keep your machine clean. Realize how long the day is, and don't rush. Measure off how much you can do, and get it done; honor the new day with a new task. Rest when you can, not when you must—life is one long rhythm of work and rest. Every day fight a little freer of petty hates, prejudices and animosities. Last begin and end the day with the Lord."—Spartanburg Herald.

... The Town of Tryon is painting new parking lines on Trade street. Is that the reason so many people haven't been parking right... Been eating some of Dudley Smith's Brookhill broilers. There's a lot in heredity and environment for these chickens taste better and are tenderer. Maybe it is because they belong to a royal line, have good food to eat, live in clean houses and are properly protected from disease, fear and other things that make flesh tough... Tryon Motor Co., certainly has a lot of beautiful new Chevrolets on display... We can't get over the Ballenger-Jackson Co., using their large display window to show off things for men only.
