

The Tryon Daily Bulletin

(The Smallest Daily Newspaper In The World)

Vol. 10. Est. 1-31-28

TRYON, N. C., THURSDAY, DEC. 23, 1937

CURB REPORTER

The first dance of the holiday season was held Thursday night at Oak Hall hotel. This annual social event given by Pine Crest Inn and Oak Hall is always an enjoyable occasion and the community is indebted to these institutions for providing this annual event for the young people . . . One of the nicest Christmas presents we know of goes to Decatur, Ala., this afternoon with Owen S. Bird. It is a large crayon portrait of his attractive little granddaughter, Ann Layman, drawn by George Aid, Tryon artist. It was made from a photograph and is a charming likeness of Ann. She has many friends in Tryon where she spends her summer vacations with her mother, Mrs. H. M. (Eleanor Bird) Layman . . . Mrs. Junius Judson tells a good one about sending some pine kindling wood to a friend in the north who had never used any. She put all the wood in the fire place at one time and soon had a hot fire and the room full of smoke . . . It has been reported that the Banty Rooster wants to express Christmas Greetings to everybody, and especially the little children for their kindness and consideration. Being just a plain chicken the public in general has shown him every courtesy any visiting guest could wish. He appreciates it, especially the pea-

Continued on Back Page

From Florida

The following letter was received this morning by C. J. Lynch from W. B. Weigel at Ft. Lauderdale:

"One is liable to run into the unusual, that is, climatically speaking. According to statements of Floridians and real estate agents, Florida has been experiencing more than the unusual climatically. But according to the papers such has been the case throughout the whole country. Hunters of ideal climatic resorts are prone to grumble as you know but I shall not join their ranks as I have found climate is universally fickle. Luckily I brought some long wool underwear with me and that together with a gas heater suffices to keep me warm in this land of sunless sunshine and dejected looking palm trees. (During the last five weeks we have had about three days of sun.) We have however, the great pleasure of anticipating the tomorrow when the usual and celebrated Florida weather will descend upon us.

"My sister and I wish you and Mrs. Lynch a very happy Christmas season.

"Yours,

"BILL."

Headlines

Japan admits that stray bullets hit U. S. gunboat. England sending more ships to Hongkong.

Spanish government reports big victory over rebels.

(There is really no outstanding news. Just the general run of sensational stuff.)