Confidential News From China

My dear Mr. Vining:

Today has been quite an exciting day in my history, for I not only received one of my husband's very rare letters from "No Man's Land", and a lot of my precious belongings saved from the invaders' eager hand, but also the Tryon Daily Bulletin's Tenth Anniversary number of January 31, which I found as I returned from town. The dentist had been doing his worst, and as I folded myself up to rest, I chose rather to read the "Bulletin" instead of a new copy of "Asia", with all its accounts of things we are living through. If my husband were here and could read your greetings and congratulations, he surely would do it with a memory of pleasant days in Tryon. He lives in an occupied city where the propagandizing papers say, "Shops are opening and conditions are returning to normal." I, along with wives from other occupied centers, am in * * * * *. If you could read the letters brought yesterday by a friend, you would know the stark truth, and it isn't lovely. The spring, summer and next winter can hold nothing but starvation, misery and death in mind and body for millions of people. Once in a very great while a letter comes through the courtesy of the Japanese consulate. When affairs of state are a little less pressing, and a personal letter is remembered to be delivered. Now and again an * * * * * press man is friendly enough to take the responsibility of a letter to a wife
