

The Tryon Daily Bulletin

(The World's Smallest Daily Newspaper)

Vol. 11. Est. 1-31-28

TRYON, N. C., TUESDAY AUGUST 30, 1938

“CURB” REPORTER

The Health Bulletin, published by the North Carolina State Board of Health in its August issue reproduced Dr. C. Arthur Lincoln's article on Health Service in Polk county which appeared in The Tryon Daily Bulletin . . . Mrs. A. J. Rongy, a guest of the Thomas Costas is a former prominent English actress who appeared under the name, Fannie Fields in plays attended by the British royalty . . . In Ballenger's ad Monday the copy should have read "Sanka and 'sich' like" are good but they are not necessary if you get Ballenger's fresh parched coffee which contains no rancid oils. This coffee is parched and ground the same day at the Ballenger Co. . . . E. G. Ballew, local representative of A Nash Tailor-Made clothes sent a copy of his advertisement in the Bulletin to the home office and received a letter from General Sales Manager Long who was impressed with the value of the Bulletin as an advertising medium, and promised to send Mr. Ballew some pictures for his ads . . . The Baptist ladies are working diligently to make money for their church building fund and are preparing a delicious chicken supper to sell to the public at Harmon Field on Thursday at 6:30. It will be a delightful gathering to which anyone in the community would enjoy . . . MacDonald

—Continued on Back Page—

Opens Dress Shop

Mrs. J. E. Brownlee has leased one of the new buildings next to Texaco Service Station and is getting it ready for the opening of her Style Shoppe on Saturday, September 3rd. Mrs. Brownlee has been to Baltimore and bought the latest styles of dresses and hats for the coming season. They will be advertised this week in the Bulletin for the opening on Saturday. Dressing booths, clothes cabinets and display windows and tables are now being installed and the public will be invited to visit the shop on Saturday.

Over Three Million Spent Last Year For State Needy

Polk county gets $7,666.15 combined Federal, State, and local funds.

Residents of Polk county last year received a total of $7,666.15 from public assistance funds, including state, federal and local expenditures to the aged needy and dependent children. Needy aged got $5,841.30 and dependent children received $1,824.85 in the county.

Eighty-one old people of Polk county and 52 children living here were listed on the state office records as having received payments during the month of June, according to figures released this week by J. A. Stewart, auditor of the division of public assistance of the

—Continued on Page Three—