"CURF" REPORTER

That stout, chunky fellow that waved at George Cathey Tuesday morning was Alvin Helmick, formerly chief carver of the Tryon Toymakers but who is now carving a name for himself as a chief inspector of the Post Office Department. He and the other officers were on the trail of something, you betcha . . . . Standing on the curb waiting for the bus on Monday afternoon was Tryon's 80 year old retired actor, Dwight Smith, who in former years acted on the stage with the noted Edwin Booth. Dwight was headed for a two weeks' visit to his old home town, Vevay, Indiana, which he had not seen in 23 years and of which he was a former mayor. Vevay was settled in 1813 by some Swiss pioneers. . . . See an ad in today's copy where W. T. Overstreet of Tampa, Fla., is offering for sale the timber on the Skyuka tract on Tryon Mountain, also the Skyuka hotel plumbing and steam heating plant which is to be dismantled.
