

The Tryon Daily Bulletin

1c Per Copy (The World's Smallest Daily Newspaper) Per Copy 1c

Vol. 11. Est. 1-31-28 TRYON, N. C., TUESDAY, NOV. 29, 1938

CURB REPORTER

Ferdinand has a leather collar around his neck and it is difficult to get at fleas finding shelter under his throat, but otherwise he seems to enjoy it immensely. He was first brought to Missildine's Pharmacy to be chloroformed. He was in the way; not wanted; and his owner couldn't bear the thought of him suffering the hardships of becoming a stray. But Ferdinand has personality and good looks and since he didn't know that he was to be put away he looked up at his executioner with trusting eyes, then rubbed his head against the side of his leg and tried to wrap his tail around as he went by. That cat has been there ever since . . . This is Charles Nes-smith's last week as owner of Tryon's Theatre. It is nice for us all that we are getting a new theatre and we have been looking forward to it with eagerness so long; but in passing from the old to the new let us take note that Charles struggled along with us during the depression and gave us the best pictures and service his ingenuity and limited funds could obtain. so as a visible means of showing our appreciation it would help him a lot personally to attend his last shows this week. "Jezebel" is on tonight, "Spawn of the North" on Wednesday and Thursday, and "Action for Slander" on Friday. He loves his

Continued on back page

Letters—

To the Bulletin,
Tryon, N. C.

Dear Sir:

Of course on Thanksgiving Day I was determined to see the Macy parade which Tony Sarg has for years designed and perfected. I just forgot about turkey and stuffing and slid over to Broadway. Found a hole in the wall where a clever man was putting his store to rights and I peered in and saw much needed stockings. Seeing

Continued on Page Three

Rev. C. R. White Is Returned Here

It is unusual for a Methodist minister to be returned to his post after the fourth year, but the Rev. C. R. White, colored, pastor of the St. Luke's C. M. E. church has just been returned to his church here by the Durham conference for the sixth year. Pastor White is a native of Northport, Ala., and the son of a prominent Negro minister; he was educated at Booker T. Washington's Tuskegee Institute and received his theological training at Paine college in Augusta, Ga. His first and only pastorate has been the Tryon church which has grown steadily in membership and service under his leadership. St. Luke's church reported to the conference that $2,750 was raised last year to repair the church building. This headed the list of achievements for the church under White's leadership and coupled with the wish of local members was a big factor in returning him to Tryon.