Vol. 12. Est. 1-31-28 TRYON, N. C., MONDAY, FEB. 13, 1939

Old Tryonites wishing to take a new drive should take a ride on the new road to the Hunting country from the Godshaw Hill entrance. Over the hill you go down past Pine Crest Inn stables and come out at Black Bottom where on the left Mrs. David Hedekin, popular equestrian, has a training ring with various types of fences for jumper horses. Here lessons are given to future members of the Tryon Hounds who have to take all kinds of jumps over fences, streams and ditches. Instead of having to ford Vaughn's creek as in the past a steel bridge has been built across the stream near the Indian trails and stage coach road to the Block House. Across the creek to the right are beautiful Siler Falls. Around the bend to the left is a pretty view of the Huntsinger place. Another turn to the right and a new panoramic view of the mountains; new roads to hill tops of Col. Arthur Smith's property and the development of Julian Calhoun, all making attractive new homesites. The road ends just before you reach the Block House crossroads . . . Frances de Villa Ball will give her final lecture on music at the Lanier library on Tuesday evening. Her talks accompanied by delightful illustrations on the piano have captivated all those who have heard her. Just another of those good things that come to Tryon.

Feagan Home Razed By Flames

The home of O. T. Feagan in Columbus was burned to the ground in early hours of Saturday morning. The building, of frame construction, was located just back of the Mills apartment house, and was formerly occupied by B. Case, township constable. The Bulletin was not informed as to the present occupants, or the probable cause of the fire.

NARROW ESCAPE

Mr. and Mrs. N. R. Rector have returned from a visit in Thomasville, N. C. While enroute to Thomasville their car skidded on a wet road near Lincolnton and crashed into a tree. The car turned over and was completely demolished. Mr. and Mrs. Rector were pulled out of the wreck without any serious injuries. So they bought a new car and continued their journey.

According to Vatican authorities the remains of Pope Pius XI will be buried Tuesday instead of Wednesday as planned. An estimated 200,000 worshippers filed slowly past the bier on which the body of the Pope lay.
