School In Aiken Receives $10,000 From B. M. Baruch

Charleston, Feb. 16.—Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier and native of South Carolina, has given $10,000 to St. Angela Academy at Aiken, operated by the Sisters of Our Lady of Mercy, it was learned today.

Previously it had been announced that the College of Charleston had been given a similar sum, and it was reported that at least one, perhaps other, educational institution in the state have been made gifts, although no formal announcement has been made.

CURB REPORTER

B. L. Ballenger is president of the Tryon Country club which holds its annual meeting tonight at 8 o'clock Marcus Caldwell, assistant Scoutmaster of Tryon Boy Scout Troop No. 1, was the first Eagle Scout of the Newberry. S. C. Council. It takes a lot of work and perseverance to become an Eagle Scout. Seth Vining, Jr., is the only active Scout now in Tryon with the Eagle rank, but everything points toward the addition of another one on Monday when Harold Taylor makes his final test before the Court of Honor. Many boys almost make the grade, but only about a dozen have completed the course in Tryon. Edgar Hendry was the first one. Then there was Charles Stackhouse, James Little, Edward Sayre, Bill Ward, Priestly Conyers, Robert Little, Anson Merrick, Nelson Jackson, III Speaking of hard work and perseverance, Dick Kell, who helped build the Tryon Theatre, Jim Perkins' house, Sunnydale and many other places, bought a lot across the street from where he was living, and during odd moments before breakfast and after supper till dark, worked on a house for himself. An old garage was ripped up for a room, excavation was made for the basement, some logs were piled on the lot. They stayed there for months;
